International Arms Secrets Sold by Spies, Says U.S. Pair

U. S., France, Britain Information Bought, They Confess.

2 Women, 3 Men Named by Couple

Switzes Break Down; Germany, Russia Called Buyers.

Paris, March 20 (U.P.).—An international spy ring concentrating on information regarding the United States, British and French armaments was uncovered today through confessions of a young American couple.

French authorities said the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Switz, of East Orange, N. J., had given them information making possible the arrest of five more persons allegedly linked with this maze of interlocking espionage system.

The secret police officially announced that "the spies worked for Germany and Soviet Russia, to the detriment of France, England and the United States."

"With the assistance of the Switzes," a police official said, "we have exposed the greatest espionage gang in history, with clear indications that their activities on a great scale involved the United States and Great Britain."

Directed Paris Branch.

Switz, former aviator, and his wife, the former Marjorie Tilley, Vassar girl, told the police they joined the gang in New York, agreeing to go to Paris for $200 a month.

Switz said he became head of the French division of the ring about a year ago, directing its activities in gaining information of France's army and navy and defense plans around Paris.

An amazing tale of espionage for other European powers interested in paying for information on defenses, chiefly of these three nations, was unfolded as the couple told their stories. They broke down after months in prison and hours of merciless questioning by the secret police, convinced of their participation in the ring.

The police said they had the cooperation of American and British secret agents in uncovering the ring.

Switz confessed he received documents and paid agents who were furnished by the paymaster of the organization, a Rumanian known as Benjamin Bercovits.

2 Women, 3 Men Implicated.

The confessions gained during the night caused the police to scurry about Paris before dawn, rounding up persons implicated by the couple's confessions. Those arrested today included:

Col. Du Moulin, also called Charras, said to be a grand officer in the Legion of Honor as a result of a distinguished army career, and connected with the important military revue, "Armee et Democratie."

Byrd Rescues Pair on Floe

Little America, Antarctica, (Via Mackey Radio) March 20 (A.P.).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd flew today to the rescue of two members of his expedition whose plane was forced down Saturday, but encountered difficulties himself.

Pilot Willam C. Bowlin and Wireless Operator Clay Bailey, who had to come down 15 miles from Little America, were found asleep near their monoplane.

Only when Byrd and his companion, Pilot William McCormick, pushed open the tent flap did the two fliers awake.

Admiral Byrd and McCormick took off at 6 a. m. to guide a ground party. Byrd's plane was grounded by engine trouble and the Admiral had to return to the main base by dog team to direct plans both for the rescue of the relief plane and for the machine it set out to help.

While these operations were proceeding, temperature fell to 15 degrees below zero.

30 Slavs Believed Dead In Landslide at Quarry

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 20 (A.P.).—More than 30 workers were believed killed today in a landslide in the Batignole Quarry at Banyitsa near the Albanian border.

Two days of excavation will be required to reach the victims.

Queen Mother Emma Of Netherlands Dies

The Hague, March 20 (A.P.).—The Dowager Queen Emma, of the Netherlands, one of the most popular and successful sovereigns in Europe, died of bronchitis today at the age of 75.

The widow of King William III and the mother of Queen Wilhelmina, she had been ill for some time. Her condition became grave a week ago.

Crowds awaiting bulletins before the palace attested to the love the rich and poor held for her. The Netherlands was plunged into deep grief by her passing.

Queen Emma was born August 2, 1858. At the age of 20 she became the second wife of the Dutch monarch. Upon his death in 1890 she became regent, and ruled until her daughter came of age and ascended the throne in 1898.

In late years she was in the background of affairs, but her loyal subjects never forgot the kindliness, sincerity, and good works that endeared her to her people while she was on the throne.

The lower chamber of parliament was informed of the death in a message from Queen Wilhelmina. It read: "It has pleased God to call our beloved mother to Him. With deep affliction we inform you of her death. We are convinced that all of our people share in the sorrow that fills us and our family."

Insull Fears 'Lynch Law,' Lawyer Says

He Plans to Return Home When Case Quiets Down, Aid Asserts.

Alexandria, Egypt, March 20 (A.P.). It was reported here tonight that the steamer Maiotis, with Samuel Insull aboard, has arrived at Port Said and was waiting a chance to pass through the Suez Canal.

The reports, which could not be verified immediately, said that the Maiotis probably would be permitted to traverse the canal Wednesday. Insull's ultimate destination was not revealed.

Athens, March 20 (A.P.).—While the world wondered today about the course of Samuel Insull's floating domain, a political storm was brewing in his erstwhile refuge here.

Subdirector Petounis, of the Athens police force, submitted to the courts the official records concerning the guarding of the fugitive and recommended that Mme. Couyoumjoglou, a friend of the Insulls, be "further dealt with" for allegedly making false statements regarding his second departure Sunday.

Wife Will Go to London.

There were indications that the grimy tramp steamer Naiotis, chartered by the former Chicagoan, was heading westward in the Mediterranean, instead of toward Suez, in search of a haven.

"Wherever he is going now," M. Xeros, one of his attorneys, said, "he will make his permanent home if the United States continues to persecute him.

"Mrs. Insull will go to Paris Saturday and thereafter will leave for London within a few days.

"Insull plans to return to the United States after the excitement of his case dies down and live in America peacefully the rest of his life.

Fears Lynching.

"They would go there now, but are afraid for their lives and afraid he will not get justice.

"Insull is afraid he may be made a fool of, or even lynched by crowds. I believe the question is a political one, and that later Insull

Senate Orders All Hoarding Silver Listed

Morgenthau Called On to Furnish Names to Support Charge.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday was in the unusual position of demanding from the Treasury a list of silver hoarders assembled by authority of its own subpenas.

Special agents of the Treasury, acting at Secretary Morgenthau's direction, obtained the long list of persons holding speculative silver stocks on the New York market. But the stimulus which made silver dealers supply the names was the authority of Senate subpenas.

This was disclosed yesterday after Senate approval of the resolution of Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, asking the Treasury for the list which Morgenthau has said showed some silver advocates to be "not disinterested" in the market.

Shortly after the Senate vote, Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the banking committee, visited Morgenthau's office.

At the Treasury, it was thought likely that when the Senate resolution had been delivered, Morgenthau would forward the names on file, though the Robinson resolution would permit a refusal "if not compatible with the public interest."

Meanwhile, awaiting word of the Administration's attitude toward the House-approved Dies silver bill, Senate silver State members let it be known last night they regarded the measure inadequate and would seek enactment of a substitute.

The Dies bill would establish a board to negotiate for the sale of agricultural surpluses abroad and accept in payment silver coin or bullion at a premium over the world price of the metal. The silver received would be deposited in the Treasury and used as backing for new currency.

The Senate silverites disclosed that they regarded it as a makeshift and still were, first of all, for a bill to remonetize the white metal.

The Treasury's list of silver hoarders is the result of an investigation of speculative purchases of the metal which was undertaken at Morgenthau's request to learn identity of those who own silver stocks.

Untaxed Whisky Is Seized In Initial U. S. Raid Here

Seventy-five sacks of ry whisky were seized by revenue agents here yesterday and one man was arrested in the District's first post-repeal case of evasion of the Federal stamp tax.

Another man who accompanied the unstamped whisky from New York fled from a trap laid by police and Federal agents.

Possibility that the whisky, which failed to bear the proper Government revenue stamps, had been smuggled into the country, was indicated when it was discovered the sacks had been recently immersed in water.

The prisoner, who will be arraigned today, gave his name as Gilbert Bruso, 30, of 151 East 117th street, New York City. He is the driver of a truck which yesterday delivered the 75 sacks of "Golden Wedding" rye to the United States Liquor Distributing Co., in the Southern Building.

Tipped off by officials of the company that the truckload was coming, Deputy Collector Ward P. Burdine, together with police, laid in wait. When the truck arrived, it carried in addition to Bruso and the rye, a "collector" for the wholesalers. Warned by conversation among the group awaiting the delivery, the "collector" legged it away.

Unstamped liquor first was discovered in possession of the local distributing company some weeks ago. At that time, 39 sacks of the same "Golden Wedding" were found to be without the proper Government stamps.

Officials of the company cooperated with revenue agents to lay the trap for the wholesalers on the occasion of yesterday's delivery.

The seizure was made under Section 3450 of the act of 1924, which has a general application to any attempt to evade the Federal stamp tax.

Plan to Lift "Nuisance" Taxes Aired

Senate Committee Seen Favorable; Income Boost Beaten.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Reenactment of the defunct capital stock tax of the 1932 revenue act as a substitute for a series of the so-called Federal nuisance tax, which yield the Treasury about $95,000,000 annually, will be proposed today to the Senate Finance Committee by its chairman, Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi.

Chairman Harrison, in announcing his proposal, said he thought prospects for adoption by the committee were good. The capital stock tax, first enacted two years ago, but automatically annulled with the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, would mean a levy of one-tenth of 1 per cent on the declared capital of all corporations.

Coupled with that tax would be an excess profits tax of 5 per cent, additional to the regular corporation tax on net earnings greater than 12½ per cent of the capitalization.

Would Drop Theater Taxes.

The finance chairman said if the committee adopts the two taxes, he would then move to strike from the present law the Federal taxes on theater admissions, radios and phonographs, electrical refrigerators, sporting goods, candy and chewing gum, soft drinks, brewers' wort, matches, furs, clocks and cartridges, and to cut in half the tax on toilet articles.

The Finance Committee will complete its consideration of the tax bill today, having voted down yesterday proposals to increase the normal and surtax rates on incomes, and exempting railroads from the proposed 2 per cent additional tax on incomes covered by consolidated returns.

The committee, however, adopted an amendment which wold give workers in the upper salary brackets a little more relief from the income tax. It raised from $8,000, as specified in the House bill, to $20,000 the sum to which the proposed 10 per cent deduction for earned income might be applied.

Approves Gains-Losses Draft.

The committee also approved the House formula for dealing with capital gains and losses, amending the House bill, however, by adding another bracket under which only 30 per cent of the gains from sale of capital assets held more than ten years would be taxable.

The section of the bill providing for the taxation of undistributed adjusted net income of personal holding companies met with committee approval after two changes were made. One would be important to family corporations deriving their income from real estate, striking rents from the taxable sources of income of such corporations.

The other amendment provided for the taxation of the income of such holding companies at the rate of 30 per cent on incomes less than $100,000 and at 40 per cent on incomes in excess of that amount.

Senator Harrison intends to propose increasing the Federal inheritance tax by 1 per cent in each bracket on estates above $1,000,000. This would increase the tax on estates of over $10,000,000 from 45 to 50 per cent.

Senator Robert M. La Follette (Republican), of Wisconsin, has pending an amendment to increase the tax on estates over $10,000,000 to 60 per cent, and to lower the exemption from the Federal tax from estates of $50,000 to $25,000.

When Is a Cat Not a Cat? When It's a Weapon!

Richmond, March 20 (A.P.).—A large, mean tomcat named "Prince" was described as a "dangerous weapon" in Henrico County Court today. The description came as Cora E. Jones, of Dumbarton, Va., her face and throat lacerated in a dozen places, appeared to testify against Edwin F. Jones.

Jones, the woman said, grabbed Prince by the tail, swung him around his head several times to get the cat "riled" and then threw him in her face.

The man did not appear, and the court was told that a check for $200 which he had given as bail when arrested Saturday had been returned marked "no funds."

Five Fire Victims Buried.

Memphis, Tenn., March 20 (A.P.). One funeral service was held today for five victims of a fire here Saturday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hammond, their 3-year-old son, Earl, jr., an infant son, and Miss Kate Kay, 19, of Ancoco, La., were buried side by side.

Wierton Co. Sued by U. S. In Code Row

Militant Strikers Urge Drastic Action in Call at White House.

"Cracking down" on big business for the first time under the NRA, the Justice Department yesterday filed a suit in equity against the Weirton Steel Co., of Weirton, W. Va., charging the use of physical violence, lay-offs, trickery and espionage in denying workers the right to bargain collectively.

Instead of pacifying the militant strikers, however, this step immediately brought a delegation to the White House. Fearing long court delay, the labor representatives declared the court action ineffectual in forcing compliance with the NRA.

The Weirton case comes at a time when major labor difficulties threaten the whole recovery campaign. As in the case of the threatened strike of automobile workers, the issue is between company unions and affiliates of the American Federation of Labor.

The controversy between Ernest T. Weir, president of the steel company, and the National Labor Board, which has been in process for six months, came to a head when the concern refused to sanction an employe election under auspices of the board. The case then was given the Department of Justice for the second time.

Company Union Charged.

The bill of complaint charges the Weir company with violating the National industrial recovery act, the steel code, its agreement with other members of the industry to comply with the code and the President's executive order of February 1, which strengthened the Labor Board.

"I have no comment now and shall have none later," Mr. Weir was quoted by the Associated Press at New York. Heretofore, he has expressed willingness to have the issue settled in court.

Accusing the company of obtaining benefits under the steel code while committing violations, the suit also charges that last June the defendant, "in anticipation of the adoption of the code, initiated, organized and imposed upon its employes and at all times since has maintained and controlled the activities of a company-dominated union under the plan of employe representation formulated by defendant."

This company union, according to the complaint, is "wholly ineffective as a means of collective bargaining and through it the defendant has interferred with the employes' right of collective bargaining." It cited that when workers joined the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers—an American Federation of Labor affiliate—the union was not recognized; that when an election was agreed to following a strike the company reuudiated its agreement by not allowing the Labor Board to supervise it.

In order to insure that the com-

Former Yale Athlete Hanged

Ted Potter, Rapidan, Va., Found Dead Near Forth Worth, Tex.

W. F. (Ted) Potter, 43, of Rapidan, Va., hailed during his college days as one of the fleetest hurdlers at Yale University, was found dead in a thicket near Fort Worth, Tex., yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

His body, with a broken rope around the neck, was found under a tree. Part of the rope dangling in the branches of the tree 7 feet above the body indicated he had been hanged.

According to Ryan, Potter arrived penniless in Fort Worth, February 24, and arrangements were made for him to stay at the Yale Club. He left the club March 12 to move to a hotel and was not seen after that. Indications were that he had been dead a week.

Federal Trade Board Threatens Steel Code

Commission Charges Price Abuses, Monopolistic Control of Industry in Report to Senate; Calls for Drastic Revisions.

In a sweeping condemnation of most of the vital provisions of the steel industry's NRA code, the Federal Trade Commission yesterday reported to the Senate that the code has given sanction to industrial abuses and indicated that the far-reaching charter should be revised drastically.

The Commission declared that the code has caused price-fixing, price discrimination, has thrown control of the code authority into the hands of the major steel companies, tends to eliminate small concerns and violates the Commission's famous "Pittsburgh-Plus" order of 1924.

It hinted that the central provisions of the code should be abrogated. It also carried the veiled threat that if proper steps to correct the code abuses are not taken, the Commission will be forced to seek in court the abolishment of offensive parts of the charter. The latter presents the possibility of one agency of the Government seeking to overthrow in court steps taken by the National Recovery Administration itself.

The report was compiled for the Senate at the instigation of Senator Borah when he and other Senators were attacking NRA as generating monopoly and eliminating the "little fellow" in business. Another report, on the oil industry, will be delivered by the Commission soon.

Striking at the heart of the price system authorized for steel under the code, the Commission report stated: "That there has been price-fixing, as well as increases in prices of steel products during the period covered by the inquiry, are conclusions warranted by ample facts."

"Under the provisions of the code and the methods of its application, prices for any given product at any oint of delivery are the same," the report stated. It points out this is accomplished by filing identical mill base prices with the Code Authority; forbidding sellers to make deductions from mill prices greater than allowed by the Authority and authorizing uniform charges for "extras," and the use of a "dis-

Hoover Aids In Air Fraud, Senate Told

Mellon, Brown Talked Over Award, Robinson Says in Session.

As definite developments in the general air mail situation marked time yesterday, Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson in a Senate speech charged that members of the Hoover Cabinet "gave their services to a combination that was unlawful, to a collusion that was fraudulent" in the framing of contracts for carrying mail by air.

Senator Robinson took the floor to substantiate a charge he made several days ago that the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, Inc., was "a strong political factor in Pennsylvania" and that "the Mellons were prominent stockholders and officers in that company."

The accuracy of this statement was challenged by Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, in a letter to Senator Robinson. Mellon said the only stock owned by members of his family constituted "quite inconsequential amounts" purchased as a "civic duty in furthering a local enterprise to establish air mail service between Washington and Pittsburgh."

Senator Robinson, after reading excerpts from the Mellon letter to him, cited documentary evidence gathered by the Black investigating committee which he contended "supports very strongly both statements that the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, Inc., was a strong political factor in Pennsylvania and that the Mellons were prominent in its affairs."

Had Strong Influence.

"I might also have said," the Democratic leader asserted, "that the company had strong political influence in Washington as well as at Harrisburg."

In asserting that the record which he cited showed that members of the Hoover Cabinet "gave their services to a combination that was unlawful, to a collusion that was frudulent," Senator Robinson referred to Mellon and former Post-

Whitney Raps Revised Stock Control Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

In a criticism as sweeping as his original rejection of the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market bill, Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, last night denounced the Administration redraft as potentially "destructive" to business.

"This new bill will have as serious effects upon the security market as the original Fletcher-Rayburn bill," he said.

"In my opinion, it will inevitably bring about declining prices and will interfere with and delay the economic recovery of the Nation."

Meantime, Chairman Sam Rayburn announced the House Interstate Commerce Committee will hear no more opposition witnesses. He said Treasury, Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Federal Reserve Board officials are in complete agreement on the revised bill.

"Can't Please Everybody."

"In this new draft, we have tried to meet legitimate criticism," Rayburn said at House hearings. "We do not hope to pass any bill that will please everybody. If we accepted every amendment, there would be nothing left in the bill but the enacting clause."

The Whitney statement was issued from his downtown hotel suite, following House committee hearings at which Thomas G. Corcoran, Reconstruction Finance Corporation lawyer, explained the redraft.

Later, Corcoran conferred with the Senate Banking Committee and its counsel, Ferdinand Pecora. It was learned the bill was discussed, although no decisions were reached. Another conference will be held tomorrow

Americans Victims of Fake Mexico Divorces, Probe Shows

Mexoco City, March 20 (A.P.).—Eighty-three American couples were victimized in the past six months by a mail order divorce ring operating in the state of Morelos, it was learned today.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of others also are believed to have received bogus decrees.

These fake documents were obtained by procuring certified statements of the validity of genuine divorces and then attaching statements to the decrees filled in by the lawyers themselves.

The American Consulate General here has informed that State Department at Washington that one-third of the papers supposed to be divorce decrees were shown in an investigation in Morelos to be false.

Many of the official signatures and seals of the decrees had been authenticated by the Consulate General before they were found to be fraudulent.

In this connection it was pointed out that the authentications merely certified to the signatures and seals of Mexican officials but did not certify the validity of the decrees themselves. No respsonibility for the contents of such documents is assumed by the Consulate General.

State Department Checks on Decrees

A thriving trade in bogus Mexican divorces supplied to American citizens for appropriate considerations has been uncovered in the State of Morelos, the State Department announced yesterday.

Mexican divorce decrees are regularly submitted to the consulate for authentication. A comparison of the consulate's list of authenticated Morelos divorces with the actual number granted revealed a marked discrepancy.

Mexican divorces are of doubtful

Railroad Pay Crisis Also Is Averted By President

Motor, Labor Leaders Agree to Meet at White House.

Walkout to Await Ruling Tomorrow

Train Workers Expected to Accept Truce on Wages.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt intervened yesterday in both the automobile and the railroad labor crises with these results:

The threatened automobile strike, scheduled for today, was postponed pending a meeting of automobile union representatives with the President tomorrow.

Automobile manufacturers representing all companies except the Ford Motor Co. agreed to come here today and join the conference tomorrow.

Railroad managers agreed to drop their demand for further wage reductions and to continue the present basic scale another six months. Railroad workers, who earlier in the day demanded a 20 per cent increase, had not replied last night to the President's demand that the present scales be continued.

The autmobile controversy, which threatens to result in the greatest strike in years and to involve workers in other industries, still smoldered with the possibility that the President is faced with a hard struggle in any attempt to reconcile the opposing groups.

Rail Truce Likely.

The possibility that the railroad crisis may be postponed at least until next fall appeared bright. Further conferences between railroad employers and employes are in prospect, but the employers' withdrawal of their previous demands opened the way for a compromise on the basis of the President's demands. Railway employes in 1932 took a 10 per cent wage cut. The roads until yesterday were asking that the cut be made 15 per cent and the workers were asking for an increase. The President repeatedly has insisted that the wages remain the same as they are now.

The automobile manufacturers, meeting in their second session in New York yesterday, were invited by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, to come to Washington. Johnson, according to the Associated Press, was in conference with the manufacturers for an hour. Immediately afterward the meeting adjourned to reconvene here. Johnson said he was returning to Washington tonight.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt sent the following telegram to William Collins, American Federation of Labor representative in Detroit:

"In the public interest I am constrained to request you to withhold strike action called for this afternoon until I can have conference in Washington in an effort to reconcile existing differences. I suggest

N. D. Proclaims Moratoriums

Attachments on Farmers, Merchants Barred by Governor.

Bismarck, N. Dak., March 20 (A.P.). North Dakota business men unable to meet obligations "due to the financial ruin which has befallen farmers," and farmers, facing ouster from lands they once owned, were today accorded protection of moratoriums.

The new moratoriums, which were added to an already large list previously proclaimed by Gov. William A. Langer, declared it illegal to levy upon or attach the stock or equipment of debtor business men, and to force farmers to leave lands they have forfeited under foreclosure until they have had opportunity to refinance.

The moratorium on business debts expires automatically July 15, while that on farm ousters will continue indefinitely.

Business men and farmers' creditors are permitted court recourse where payments on debts can be effected without material loss to the merchant and where the farmer is not treating the holder of the land's title fairly.

Elizabeth City, N. C., March 20 (A.P.).—Marvin Mercer, one of the proprietors of the Carolina Hardware Co. here, was killed today when the building's roof collapsed, pinning him beneath the debris. The cause of the crash was not determined immediately.

Strikes Linked To Invention Of Machines

Sporadic strikes have punctuated American industrial history since colonial days.

Millions of men have been involved. Wages and working hours have precipitated most of the walkouts. The rise of the machine age ushered in the era of disputes that interrupted economic security of whole States.

The Nation's first strike occurred in 1786 when journeymen printers in Philadelphia walked out to enforce their demands for a minimum wage of $6 a wek. As world and national market expanded in the eighteenth century America faced a line of cleavage between workers and employers, and the strike was used as a protective weapon in many instances to uphold living standards.

It was not until 1827 that the labor movement gained much headway in the United States. Before that year what few industrial disputes that had arisen were conducted on a small scale and without organization on the part of the workers. The strikes of that period were caused primarily by rising prices and the consequent demand for higher wages. In some instances there were spasmodic attempts to obtain a 10-hour day. The country had 173 strikes from 1833 to 1837, but the panic of the latter year crushed organized labor. In the period of depression that followed there were few strikes. It was not until the Civil War had faded into the background of history that the strike was employed again as a thunderous weapon by labor.

First Major Dispute.

The year 1877, which found the United States in the throes of one of its worst depressions, was marked by the first industrial dispute of Nation-wide importance when the workers of the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania Railroads struck in protest against a wage reduction. The men were unorganized, but the strike spread like wildfire, with a toll of several killed and millions of dollars worth of property destroyed. The workers were forced to capitulate with their demands rejected.

Shop employes of the Gould railroads struck in 1885, under the direction of the recently formed Knights of Labor and won their demands. The next year found the Knights of Labor routed during another strike against the same string of roads. The year 1886 was marked by a tidal wave of strikes and lockouts over the eight-hour day issue, with the Knights of Labor losing in most instances. Anarchists addressed a meeting in Chicago and urged violence against police, denouncing their activities against the workers. Fifteen policemen were killed by a bomb hurled during the rally. This unfortunate circumstance, with which the workers had no connection, alienated public sentiment. The sequel was the abrupt decline of the Knights of Labor.

The succeeding force was the American Federation of Labor, which organized skilled workers on craft lines. As a result of this policy of the A. F. of L. there has been no general strike in the United States.

War Prevented Strikes.

The cycle of bad times followed the prosperity that had reigned as America moved triumphantly into the new century and labor found itself forced to adopt defensive tactics after 1905. Then the war brought renewed prosperity to American industry. When the United States entered the war in 1917, the American Federation of Labor, cooperating with President Wilson's plea for National unity in time of crisis, discouraged strikes in essential industries. Such strikes as did occur were mediated by Governmental boards.

General wage reductions followed the collapse of the period of prosperity that glimmered for a few years after the war. Both anthracite and bituminous fields in Pennsylvania and West Virginia were paralyzed by a strike in 1922, but the workers won their demands. The railroad shopmen's strike in the same year found 500,000 men walking out when the unions refused to accept a Railroad Labor Board decision reducing wages. Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, in September, obtained a sweeping injunction which hindered the activities of the strikers. The strike ended later in the year with both sides, paradoxically, claiming victory.

Falling prices and a general stable level of wages largely forstalled industrial outbreaks with the coming of 1923. In 1926 a major strike was that of textile workers in Passaic, N. J., with their demands met at the close of hostilities. In July of the same year, 40,000 cloak and suit workers in New York City walked out of their shops and did not reach an agreement with their employers until later in the year.

April 1, 1927, found 200,000 bituminous coal miners on strike when the operators refused to renew the agreement that had existed for several years. In 1928 the union negotiated with employers by districts, taking wage cuts in several instances.

Virginia Mill Strike.

There were no major disputes in 1929, 1930 and 1931 with the outstanding exception of the Danville, Va., strike which occurred late in 1930. It put an end to a sort of labor utopia in which Virginia workers were participants in management of cotton mills. The strike reached such proportions that 900 soldiers were mobilized, and Gov. Pollard ordered the militia to the scene of unrest.

A plan to set up an arbitration board, offered by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was refused by the mill owners and, after a four-months' idleness, the strikers, beaten, voted to go back to work early in 1931.

It was not until early 1932 that labor troubles of National importance burst anew. April 1 found 90 per cent of the coal mines closed with 90,000 miners out in Illinois, 25,000 out in Ohio and all the miners on strike in Indiana. In Illinois the conflict was solved rather quickly as the operators offered a $4-a-day pay, but in the other two States peace could not be reached before August and the end of May, respectively. In Indiana Gov. Leslie had to order martial law in Vigo County and Gov. White of Ohio had to mobilize the National Guard.

Numerous strikes in the automobile industry marked 1933. In January a strike of 6,000 body makers in the Briggs Manufacturing Co., Detroit, stopped work for 6,000 employes of the Murray Corporation and 100,000 of the Ford Motor Co. An increase in the pay rates brought the conflict to an end.

Other automobile strikes followed and it was not until November 7, that, under the auspices of the National Labor Board, a compromise was found and the conflict smoothed.

Auto Strike Averted by Roosevelt

Rail Pay Crisis Also Is Prevented by Plea of President.

Thursday. Will you advise me immediately?"

Strike Is Postponed.

Collins replied:

"Your important telegram received. Power to act rests with officers' conference which convenes at 5 o'clock today at Pontiac, Mich. Rest assured that I will urge them to meet situation in spirit you ask. Will notify you immediately of action of officers' conference."

It was at this conference that decision was reached to postpone the strike and to send representatives to Washington.

Immediately after President Roosevelt sent his message, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sent the following telegram to Collins:

"The President of the United States has requested that the strike called by automobile workers for Wednesday morning be postponed. In making this request the President states that he is asking representatives of the automobile manufacturers and representatives of the automobile workers to meet with him in Washington on Thursday, March 22, for the purpose of permitting him to give consideration to the strike situation.

Urges Compliance.

"It is my opinion that the highest and best interests of the automobile workers will be served through a prompt and sincere compliance with the President's request. In the interest of the common good I respectfully urge that the automobile workers and their representatives carry out the President's request.

"The interests of the automobile workers will be fully protected, their cause promoted and justice to which they are entitled will be more quickly realized through a favorable, whole-hearted and immediate response to the President's recommendation. In making this appeal for compliance with the President's request I wish to assure you that the automobile workers will be adequately represented at the conference with the President and the interests of the automobile workers will be safeguarded by those representatives of the automobile workers who are invited to be in attendance at the President's conference."

Collins had announced earlier, according to the Associated Press, that union officials intended to carry out plans for strikes at Detroit, Flint, Pontiac and Lansing plants unless "favorable" reports were received from the New York meeting of manufacturers. He had estimated that 44,000 men would leave their machines today unless a compromise came and that more would follow.

Say Roosevelt Holds Answer.

Following the meeting at which it was decided to postpone the strike, Collins made the following statement to the United Press:

"The men have protested that long lines of men were being employed by the industry for the purpose of filling the plants with floaters, and they objected to this.

"The President, center of the Government, holds the answer to the situation, and he only.

"The men had appealed to the Labor Board, then to Johnson, and finally to the President for the enforcement of the right to collective bargaining. The men want to escape company domination.

"We are hopeful that the President will accomplish what the law and its administrator evidently have failed to do."

Industry's Deadlock.

There was no indication that a compromise was in sight. The automobile workers are insisting upon recognition of American Federation of Labor unions. The manufacturers are just as firm in their insistence that such unions would not be recognized, but that the men would be accorded the right of collective bargaining guaranteed them under the National recovery act.

Gen. Johnson, following acceptance by the manufacturers of his invitation to come to Washington, declared that he could not disclose any of the conversations he had with employers because they were "highly confidential."

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the body which represents the industry and which had been meeting on the strike situation, made this statement:

"Mr. Green and Mr. Collins, of the American Federation of Labor, have admitted that the strike is not for hours and wages and said that they have called the strike because of the charges they make that the manufacturers have not complied with the law.

"The manufacturers assert that they have complied with the law in letter and spirit and that Mr. Green is using his official position in NRA and of the National Labor Board to foment the strike in the hope that men will believe the Government is behind the American Federation of Labor in its effort to organize them."

The workers probably will be represented at the White House conference by four union officials, including Green and Collins. The automobile manufacturers also probably will be asked to name four representatives. It was understood that the President will not see the automobile men today, but will ask both sides to meet with him at the same time tomorrow.

There is some discussion of the possibility that if the conferences fail President Roosevelt may resort to the licensing provisions of the National recovery act. The law says that licensing may be resorted to "whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policies of this title" exist.

The policies include "to induce and maintain united action of labor and management under adequate governmental sanctions and supervision."

Provisions of Law.

Under the law the President may give public notice, hold a hearing, declare it essential to license a whole industry and then order that after a certain date no unit of that industry may operate without a license in which he may write such terms as he thinks necessary. The President has full power to withhold or revoke a license.

In his letter to railroad managers and workers President Roosevelt expressed "profound disappointment" over the fact that the two sides had made no progress toward a settlement.

"I fear," he said, "that sight is being lost of the most important factor of all, the good of the country. If no agreement is reached, and in default of arbitration, it may be necessary for me, with due regard to the protection of the general public interest, to appoint a commission to examine thoroughly into the labor controversy, covering all classes of railroad employment, in order that the country may be advised of the merits."

The President added that he did not believe conditions were yet ripe for a wise settlement of the issues and that active prosecution of the controversy would have a "most disturbing and unfortunate influence."

Charges Low Wages.

Some railroad employes, he said, "are now receiving compensation for their work at rates which are below minimums which have been established in the NRA codes, if not actually below a subsistence basis."

He said this situation does not apply to many employes but that to the extent that it does exist it should be corrected.

The President offered the services of Joseph B. Eastman, transportation coordinator, if the opposing sides desire his services to help compose their differences.

The letter was addressed to W. F. Thiehoff, chairman of the Conference Committee of Managers, and A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Railway Executives Association.

In his reply to the President, Thiehoff said:

"The conference committee of managers has received your letter of this date addressed jointly to it and to the Association of Railway Labor Executives.

"Giving consideration to your suggestions and requests, we have sent a letter to the Association of Railway Labor Executives, a copy of which is inclosed, in which we express a willingness to conform to the program set forth in your letter, and to exert our best efforts to reach an agreement in respect thereto."

Letter to Union Chiefs.

The letter to the union executives said:

"We have this day received the further letter of the President of the United States addressed jointly to your association and to our committee.

"It is apparent that our present controversies must be subordinated to the National interest. We, therefore, wish to say to you that our committee stands ready and willing to accept the program set forth in the President's letter.

"If you will agree with us we will withdraw our notices of a 15 per cent reduction in basic rates of pay and agree with you, in lieu thereof, to such extension of the present deduction agreement to such time subsequent to January 1, 1935, as will permit, if that should become necessary, of an orderly determination after that time of the basic rates of pay, to take effect at the end of such deduction arrangement in the light of conditions existing at that time.

"This will avoid the necessity of further negotiation and meetings throughout the year 1934 and yet give to you and us an opportunity for orderly procedure thereafter if that should become necessary under conditions then existing.

Will Revise Pay.

"So far as the compensation of lower paid men represented by you below the minimum of NRA codes is concerned, we stand ready to seek an accord with you in respect to regularly assigned men, giving proper consideration in connection therewith to such emoluments or forms of compensation as are received by such employes, in certain sections oof the country and with certain classes of employes, through the medium of housing, meals, fuel, water and light, at company expense, or gratuities.

"Our committee is ready to meet with you, or your representatives, to reach an agreement on these matters."

In an earlier statement, in which the 20 per cent increase in pay was asked, the railway brotherhoods denied they were seeking to establish peak rates of pay, "but only to prevent continued wage reductions."

The statement denied the implication of the railroads that increased wages at this time would undermine savings banks and life insurance companies owning railroad bonds.

"In the belief," the statement said, "that it might be possible to avoid controversy at this time, we have thus far refrained from requesting the increase in basic rates of pay amply justified by current economic developments.

"If you are determined to prosecute the controversy you have instituted, any reason for deferring our request is removed.

Ask 10 Per Cent Increase.

"Accordingly, we request that you consider this as a counter proposal and as formal notice of our desire to increase basic rates of pay by 10 per cent effective on and after July 1, 1934."

The proposed 10 per cent would be in addition to restoration of the 10 per cent pay cut, making a total increase of 20 per cent.

Meanwhile, a resolution was introduced in the House asking an investigation of the automobile industry's treatment of labor. In introducing the resolution, Representative Weideman (Democrat), Michigan, said that Detroit manufacturers had informed him they would not obey the mandate of Congress under NRA affecting organized labor.

"If there are any labor disorders in the city of Detroit, the automobile manufacturers will be responsible," he said.

Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, declared that this is not the time "for any organization to incite trouble" and that such action would be "disloyal to the President of the United States."

"What these men are fighting for in Detroit is to organize their own unions," Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, replied.

Violations Charged.

This price system, the commission reported:

1. Violates the Pittsburgh-plus order issued in 1924 forbidding the use of a base point from which freight charges on steel are computed whether there is any actual freight or not.

2. Tends to eliminate "the small enterprise not located at the basing point by requiring it to charge the same amount for freight on deliveries in its immediate vicinity as if the product had been in fact shipped from the basing point which is commonly a point at which mills of large competitores are located."

3. Results in discriminatory net mill prices.

4. Discriminates against fabricators at mill points no longer basing points.

5. Has a tendency to "centralize the producing and fabricating industries at the basing points."

6. Minimizes the usefulness of waterway and truck transportation because of the imposition of all-rail freight.

Discrimination Cited.

7. Places powerful manufacturers or groups of manufacturers in a position to compel the industry to discriminate in their favor. The Detroit automobile manufacturers, it charges, have forced thc code authority to approve an arbitrary differential in favor of Southern Michigan of $3 to $5 a ton.

8. Causes discrimination against such important steel-producing centers as the Youngstown, Ohio, district.

As to dominance of the Code Authority by large steel concerns, the commission reported that the United States Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation control about 53 per cent of voting power on the authority. "Stated in the briefest preliminary way," the report said, "the code constitutes the board of directors of the American Iron & Steel Institute as the code authority for its administration and enforcement."

What the reaction of NRA to the report would be was not apparent last night. As a key-industry, however, the steel industry's code is regarded as a weighty matter and the outcome of the steel case may be looked upon as an indication of treatment of other codes, it was indicated.

Girl, 17, Is Jailed On Perjury Charge

Change in Testimony Brings Arrest.

Because of an alleged variance between statements she made several weeks ago in Police Court and those she made yesterday when she appeared before the District grand jury, Dorothy Gray, 17, yesterday was arrested on a warrant charging perjury and sworn out by Assistant United States Attorney Charles Murray.

Miss Gray was taken before United State Commissioner N. C. Turnage, who ordered her held under bond of $2,000 for a hearing Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

The case in which the witness was involved concerned a criminal charge against Frank Tolson, 40. She was the complaining witness against Tolson.

Prosecutor Sure Youth Was Slain

X-Ray Photos Show Neck Was Stretched.

Tiffin, Ohio, March 20 (AP).—The belief oof Prosecutor Paul A. Flynn that 13-year-old John Summers was strangled was strengthened late today, he said, by a formal medical report on the lad's death.

Dr. Victor L. Magers, after examining X-ray photographs, reported they showed the vertebrae of the neck had been stretched apart slightly, but that no fracture had occurred.

The prosecutor interpreted this as indicating death was caused by strangulation, but not by hanging. He also pointed out that marks of a rope around the boy's neck almost completely encircled it.

Officers have been working on a theory the boy was slain by a Moron ever since the body was discovered Saturday night on the floor of a woodshed behind his home here.

pany union plan would win at the polls December 11, the Weir company, according to the charge, "employed various means of coercion, intimidation and interference, including discharges, demotions, layoffs and changes in conditions of employment."

In addition, the employers are charged with declaring they would close down plants if the Amalgamated Union prevailed, and with circulating letters among workers from customers to the effect they would cancel orders in the same event. The management also is accused of coercive speeches, and of counting mutilated ballots in its favor.

Citing that the President's Executive order of February 1 provided that the Labor Board conduct elections, the suit alleges the company obstructed this by refusing to turn over pay roll lists which would enable agents of the Board to identify workers. It is charged the management announced it would not deal with those chosen if the election was held.

The court is asked to issue an order restraining the management from interfering with the workers' right to bargain collectively or to self-organization as guaranteed in the NIRA. It also asks that the company be forced to file a list of employes with the court in order that an election may be held.

The action is brought in Delaware, where the Weir company is incorporated. It bears the names of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Assistant Attorney General Harold M. Stephen and Special Assistants James Lawrence Fly and Milton Handler. The latter is legal adviser to the Labor Board.

Despite this move in their behalf, the strikers' delegation left with Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant secretary to President Roosevelt, a strongly worded petition demanding more substantial efforts for their support. He assured them it would be given the President, who is expected to refer it to the Justice Department.

Long Delay Feared.

The petition declares the injunction is "not a criminal prosecution," and is not enough; that even if won "it does not force Weir to deal with our union." Declaring "there are today in Weirton 600 men with families idle and hungry while the mill is running full blast," it warns that the court proceeding may last a whole year.

The petition, asserting "all your rulings and orders have been disregarded completely," then asks:

"Must all workers seeking their rights be forced to sacrifice their homes and see their children go without food before Washington will do something for them?

"Finally, therefore, we call upon you to get Weir to comply with the NRA within 48 hours, or get the Wagner bill passed this week, or else stop pretending that any immediate and effective action by the Government is possible. In that case, in view of your earlier statements, we ask you to call upon the steel workers of the country to strike to get the rights you can't get otherwise."

The petition was presented by a delegation, headed by William J. Long, of Weirton, representing union workers in the employ of the National Steel Corporation with mills at Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va.; Steubenville, Ohio, and Ecorse, Mich.

Meanwhile, on another labor front, an election was being held at Philadelphia to determine who the workers of the E. G. Budd Manufacturing Co. want to represent them. In the first four hours of voting only 12 ballots were cast, because a previous election had been won by the company union.

Yesterday's election was conducted merely for the sake of complying with NRA regulations, for the previous balloting had taken place after Administrator Hugh S. Johnson ordered it postponed. Gen. Johnson's action was taken because 800 employes who had gone on strike were excluded from the polls. They could have taken part yesterday, but decided to ignore the election, which was conducted by George Buckley and J. H. Wootin as emissaries of the NRA.

Roy May, 30, of the 2100 block of P street northwest, driver of the other car, and Joseph E. Fealey, 16, first block of Seventeenth street northeast, were injured seriously. All were treated at Casualty Hospital.

Roosevelt's Rail Message

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's letter to W. F. Thiehoff, chairman of the conference committee of railroad managers, and A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association:

"Gentlemen:

"I have been advised of what has transpired at the conferences between the conference committee of managers, representing the railroads, and the Railway Labor Executives Association, representing the employes, which have been held in response to my communication of February 14, 1934. In that communication I expressed the hope 'that the railroads and their employes may be able to agree upon an extension of the present agreement for at least six months,' expressing also my conviction that 'such an extension would be of advantage to those directly concerned, and also to the country.'

"It is a profound disappointment to learn that no progress toward an agreement has been made at the conference. I fear that sight is being lost of the most important factor of all, the good of the country. If no agreement is reached, and in default of arbitration, it may be necessary for me, with due regard to the protection of the general public interest, to appoint a commission to examine thoroughly into the labor controversy, covering all classes of railroad employment, in order that the country may be advised of the merits. For the reasons stated in my communication of February 14, I believe that conditions are not yet ripe for a wise settlement of these issues, and that the active prosecution of the controversy at the present time would have a most disturbing and unfortunate influence. Nor would a postponement be in general unfair to the employes.

"Since I addressed my previous communication to you, however, the fact has been developed that some of the railroad employes are now receiving compensation for their work at rates which are below minimums which have been established in the NRA codes, if not actually below a subsistence basis. This does not apply to any very large fraction of the employes, but nevertheless such a situation does exist. To the extent that it exists, it should be corrected, and in this expression of opinion I feel confident that the railroads and the holders of their securities will concur. I am informed that the Federal Coordinator of Transportation now has in his possession the detailed facts in regard to this matter. It should be adjusted in connection with any postponement of the major wage issue.

"I shall be glad to extend to you the services of the Federal Coordinator of Transportation to help in composing your present differences, if that is desired. For the good of the country I strongly urge that further efforts be made to reach an agreement.

"Very sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

The statue is to be erected in the National Capital without cost to the Government on other than Government land at a place and of a fashion which meets with approval of the Fine Arts Commission.

The measure was introduced by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York. It was put through by Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky.

Condemned Slayer's Sentence Commuted

Montgomery, Ala., March 20 (AP).—Gov. B. M. Miller today commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence of Willie Peterson, Birmingham Negro, convicted of the slaying of Miss Augusta Williams, prominent society girl.

Peterson is in Kilby Prison with incurable tuberculosis and was slated to die in the electric chair March 30. Gov. Miller in his order said, "There is grave doubt as to his guilt."

Policeman Chases Man Out of Shoes

One Gets Away in Stolen Auto Sequence.

Maryland State Policeman Charles Durham may have to run a man "clean out of his shoes," but he gets his man—or at least one of 'em.

Yesterday he sighted two automobiles headed north on the Baltimore boulevard near Laurel, each driven by a colored youth. He knew they were stolen.

A chase of several miles ensued. The cars turned off on a dirt road. Several more miles were covered. Cars and the motorcycle were abandoned. Feet flew. So did the shoes of Havey Fletcher, 17, of Washington.

At the end of another mile Fletcher, barefooted, found himself in the clutches of the law charged with larceny of an auto. His companion passed over the distant horizon.

Parisians Riot Seeking Bank Case Suspects

Doumergue Pledges All Guilty to Be Jailed; 8 Held in Paris.

Paris, March 20 (AP).—A fresh governmental pledge to "clean up the Stavisky scandal" was given by Premier Gaston Doumergue today, after an angry mob attempted to seize eight prisoners in the case.

In an address to editors of provincial papers, Doumergue asserted: "The first stage of my program is to give confidence to the country; with the crime punished, confidence will return by the force of things. All those criminally responsible will be punished as they deserve to be."

Governmental economies will be a second phase of his program, the former president stated.

Transfer Prisoners.

The eight prisoners were transferred to a jail here from Bayonne, where the Municipal Pawnshop organized by the late Serge Stavisky collapsed with a loss of at least $40,000,000. When they arrived in Paris, Thousands were waiting outside the station.

Police attempted to smuggle their prisoners through an underground passage but were met at the exit by excited crowds.

As a Parliamentary commission continued its investigation of the Stavisky crash, which resulted in the overthrow of two governments, rioting, suicide and murder, doubts were expressed that Stavisky killed himself with a pistol.

Conflict on Suicide.

Police announced he shot himself to avoid arrest when they closed in on him in a little chateau to which he fled last December. A motion picture film of the scene was shown privately to the investigators. Some members claimed there were discrepancies between the film and the report of police.

Because of this, it was said, the body of Stavisky might be exhumed to check details.

Rector Corbin was driving the car that hit the boy. With his sister, Miss Inez Corbin, he was en route to Washington in response to a message that his father, Cicero Corbin, was dying in a hospital there.

Corbin was given a preliminary hearing and bond arranged before he proceeded to his father's bedside.

Movie Czar Bans Dillinger Pictures

Hollywood, Calif., March 20 (AP).—Word was received here today that a ban has been placed by Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, against any film production based on the life or exploits of John Dillinger, notorious Indiana outlaw.

Members of the organization were notified by Hays that such a picture would be "detrimental to the best public interest." The Hays organization embraces nearly all the major companies in the industry.

Hectic Quiet

273 Traffic Cases in Day Called "Average."

It was rather a quiet day around the Traffic Bureau yesterday.

Capt. Smith said the daily average ranged from 250 to 275. Overtime parking led in the number of arrests. Prohibited parking was second and double parking third.

"A lot of policemen were tied up in court, and couldn't do as much work as usual," the captain said.

Ancient Yunnan, Tucked Away in Inner China, Beckons Savant for Another Period of Exile

Dr. Joseph F. Rock—he's the one without the baton and cymbal—is planning his fifth trip to Tibet and southwestern China to continue his study of the strange Nakhis. The other chap is a Nakhi sorcerer, or tomba, who is participating in a religious rite to drive out the demon Ndo. Also shown is a page from a Nakhi book. The upper panel is a pictograph; the lower, a series of phonetic characters, a form of shorthand.

Dr. Joseph Rock Leaves Saturday for Distant and Strange Land.

Plans to ContinueStudies of Language and Pictographs.

Have you ever desired to "get away from it all?" Yes? Then give a thought to Yunnan, which is in southwest China and is the primitive retreat to which Dr. Joseph F. Rock will return soon for another period of self-exile.

Yunnan, and Northwest Yunnan, where the people live like they did when Christ left Nazareth, where they write by drawing pictures like the Egyptians did—in short, a place which Kipling might have had in mind when he begged to be shipped east of Suez.

Dr. Rock should have a Chinese, or, more specifically, a Nakhi accent, after 12 years of studying the religion and language of the Nakhi (pronounced Nashi) peoples, but instead he still betrays his Viennese nativity when talking. And he talks enthusiastically of the fascinating land of the Nakhis and of his plans to write four volumes on their history, religion, literature and written language.

To Leave Saturday.

The Austro-Chinese-American has been in Washington only a short time. He returned from China last fall and is to leave Saturday for his adopted East. It will be his fifth trip to China and Tibet since 1923.

An explorer, botanist, zoologist and photographer, Dr. Rock has found time during his years of research to master the written Chinese language and translate the difficult Nakhi pictographs. Or perhaps it is more correct to say that the Tibetan scholar has found time to continue his work as an explorer, botanist, ornithologist, zoologist and photographer.

One of the pictographs tells the story of a couple of lovers of long ago whose sad fate is reminiscent of Romeo and Juliet. Its crude pictures and phonetic markings are translated into the activities of a Chinese maiden who is urged by demons to climb a mountain and hang herself.

Tale Still Lives.

Some time later, her sweetheart finds her lifeless body hanging from a limb. Her soul, though is still on the scene and tries to convince him he should join her in death. When he demurs, the soul of his departed lover compels him to end his life.

The Nakhis, reading this bitter tale, believe Kamegyumigkian (the woman) and Ndgibuejulapar (the man) live in the clouds above the mountains to this day, and when lovers end their lives, their souls go to join them.

Dr Rock again will go back to Yunnan as a $1-a-year-man in the Department of Agriculture, for which he performs botanical research. On his last visit, which began in 1930 and ended last October, he led a botanical expedition for the University of California and an ornithological expedition for Harvard University.

Although only 50 years old, Dr. Rock doubts whether he will do any more serious exploring in Tibet but intends to locate in Pieping and write his history of the Nakhis, which will be published in London. It is a formidable assignment whic hhe has given himself because the natives do not date their writings. It is fairly certain, however, that their pictographics are upward of 1,500 or 2,00 years old.

600 Volumes In Library.

The forthcoming volumes also will describe the geography of Eastern Tibet and Western China from Siam to Southwest Mongolia.

Jaded Washingtonians looking for new places to go and who are interested in this exotic section of the globe may get further ideas of its character by visiting the Library of Congress and browsing through the 600 volumes of pictographic literature contributed by Dr. Rock when he returned from an earlier expedition several years ago.

But they will have to do their own translating. A little practice first on deciphering Egyptian hieroglyphics may be helpful.

That Yunnan has its virtues is demonstrated by the fact that two Nakhi boys who accompanied Dr. Rock back to the United States in 1927 were willing enough to return, after a two-month dose of automobiles, skyscrapers, subways, pie a la mode and elevators.

They came to study taxidermy, the one, and photography, the other. Now the boys are Dr. Rock's assistants.

New Stock Act Curtails Trade, Brokers Claim

New York, March 20 (AP).—Wall street's attitude toward the revised Fletcher-Rayburn bill to regulate securities exchanges was decidedly lukewarm today.

While brokers were mostly inclined to grant that the revisions tended to remove the threat of heavy liquidation of marginal accounts which they saw in the first draft, many complained that the requirements retained would seriously curtail trading.

It was felt that so far as trading in common stocks was concerned, the requirement that the purchaser put up 60 per cent of the price would generally apply, and that such a requirement would be sufficient to check speculative activity.

A few brokers and bankers commenting informally said the revisions in the bill were decidedly welcome, and removed many of the features of the first draft which they felt had been "unworkable."

The best that the majority could say of the new bill, however, was that it was "a step in the right direction."

It was explained that the requirement that a purchaser of stocks put up 60 per cent of the purchase price was a severe tightening of the present requirements. Sixty per cent of the purchase price, it was pointed out, amounts to 150 per cent of the debit balance, which is three times as severe as the New York Stock Exchange's present 50 per cent requirement for accounts of $5,000 or less, and five times as severe as the requirement of 30 per cent for larger accounts.

Some brokers acknowledged that these requirements would tend to keep the small speculator from over-reaching himself, which is one of the objectives of regulation. But several insisted that it would so restrict trading as to make the market extremely "thin," resulting in wide price changes between transactions.

"Maryland Day" Celebration Set for Sunday Is on Wrong Date, Says Dr. Matthews Andrews

Tercentenary Commission Secretary Explains Popular Error.

By Marion Butler.

Baltimore, March 29.—No whining shells from Dahlgren Naval Proving Grounds will rush through the air Sunday above old St. Clement's Island on the Potomac, giving Marylanders a start of surprise during impressive tercentenary exercises there celebrating Maryland Day.

But a milder species of shock is in order for many, preceding that event, in statements made at an exclusive interview with Dr. Matthews Page Andrews, executive secretary of the Tercentenary Commission and perhaps the most noted of Maryland's modern historians.

Dr. Andrews discussed popular misapprehensions regarding Maryland history. In particular, he clarified miconceptions as to Maryland Day, March 25, widely accepted as the day on which the first Colonists from the Ark and the Dove set foot on Maryland shores.

"In reality," Dr. Andrews declared, "Leonard Calvert's settlers disembarked on the island much earlier in March than this date, probably around the seventh or tenth of the month."

Backing up his statement with frequent references to rare Maryland records and to the chronicle of the voyage of the Ark and Dove, penned by Jesuit Father Andrew White, Maryland's first historian, Dr. Andrews pointed out that the two ships left Point Comfort February 21, entering the Potomac River March 5. Allowing for the most adverse sailing conditions, it could not have taken more than five days to tack the few miles up the river to the island.

Had Much Work to Do.

From the account of Father White, enterprises were begun by the voyagers, after anchoring at St. Clements, that must have taken several weeks of work prior to March 27, the date on which they took possession of land 30 miles down the Potomac for their permanent settlement of St. Marys City.

A palisade for protection from Indian raids was the first project, and the building of a brigantine out of seasoned timber brought over in the holds of the Ark. Negotiations were begun with Capt. Henry Fleet, pioneer Virginia adventurer, to act as guide and interpreter in selecting a permanent settlement site. And two trips were made by Gov. Calvert in the Dove to arrange friendly settlement plans with the chief of the Piscataways, a tribe of Indians on the Virginia shore, and the Indian emperor of Potomac Town, not far from what is now the District of Columbia.

"Plainly," Dr. Andrews emphasized, "such problems could not have been dealt with in the two days between the generally accepted landing date at St. Clements of March 25, and the actual establishment of the commonwealth at St. Marys City on March 27, 1634, following Leonard Calvert's successful treaty there that day with the Yaocomico Indians.

"The fact that March 25 has long been celebrated as Maryland Day is due in great measure to Father White's chronicle," Dr. Andrews said, explaining that as an ecclesiastic, Father White naturally stressed that date when mass first was celebrated on the island in honor of the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, litanies recited, and the large wooden cross erected, which the present stone cross, to be dedicated Sunday by tercentenary and ecclesiastic officials, will commemorate.

"Toleration Act" Misnamed.

Another popular Maryland misapprehension, which Dr. Andrews would like to see dispersed, is the State's claim to priority in its famed "freedom of conscience" principle as based on the Toleration act of 1649.

"Maryland has the best of claims to being the first government to observe the great principle of religious toleration," Dr. Andrews stated, "but that claim should not be based on the so-called 'Toleration Act,' whose right title is 'The Act Concerning Religion.' It should be founded on the fact that Maryland was the first to practice religious toleration during all of her first years of settlement. Curiously, it can be said that the 'Toleration Act of 1649' was really the beginning of an intolerance which lasted for 10 years! A careful perusal will show that the act guaranteed religious freedom only to those who believed in the Trinity, providing penalties of confiscation of property and hanging for the dissenters."

Dr. Andrews pointed out a minor "misnomer" which he said he was glad to see was slowly disappearing throughout the State.

"I used to come in contact with numbers of people who referred to Cecil Calvert, 2d Lord Baltimore, as 'Cecilius,' " he smiled. "One might as well call King James, 'Jacobus,' then, for the ending is merely a Latin termination tacked on and would mightily have surprised both celebrities."

Has Written Various Works.

Dr. Andrews, besides presiding over tercentenary commission offices in Baltimore, is chairman of the tercentenary celebrations committee. He is the author of a number of volumes on the Tercentenary History of Maryland, and is regarded as an authority on tercentenary subjects. "The Founding of Maryland," "The History of Maryland," and "A Heritage of Freedom," are some of his other works. At present a resident in Baltimore, he is a descendant of Charles Willson Peale.

Especially busy this week, Dr. Andrews is aiding in the arrangement of Sunday's tercentenary ceremony on St. Clements Island, which will be the second largest celebration of the tercentenary year. Ceremonies will start promptly at 2:30 p. m. on the historic island which Father Andrew White named, but which Government officials know today as Blackistone Island. This first landing place of the Calvert settlers was taken over by naval authorities in 1919 as being in the direct line of fire of the long-range test guns at Dahlgren Proving Grounds whose shells pass over this island in their 25-mile range.

Three Celebrities Were Born On One Martinsburg Street

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Next to a log cabin there is evidence to support the belief that the best birthplace for a statesman-to-be is on East Burke street here.

The roster of the nationally-known Americans who first saw light in their homes on East Burke street include: A. Willis Robertson, representative from the Northern Neck of Virginia.

Forty-seven years ago, he was born, the son of a Baptist minister, within a few yards of the home where United States Senator Harry Floyd Byrd, of Virginia, was born June 13 of the same year.

In the home adjoining that of the parents of Senator Byrd, Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the Wilson Cabinet, who spent his early years in residence here, was born.

The Byrds and Robertsons moved from here when the boys were young, both going to Virginia. The boys later found themselves in the Virginia State Senate together; in 1933 they found themselves in Congress, Robertson in the House and Byrd in the Senate.

Charles Town Council Would Alter Tax Law

Defers Action on Power Franchise; Submits to Building Code.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—The State law which prevents small communities from collecting their own taxes was formally disapproved by the Charles Town council last night.

The council instructed City Attorney Lee Bushong to urge Delegate U. S. Martin to seek amendment of the law to permit Charles Town to conduct its own taxation. The present law provides that personal and real estate taxes be collected by the sheriff, and capitation and dog taxes by the county assessor.

R. L. Satterfield was granted a restaurant license. The council also voted to submit to the municipal building code.

Decision on renewing the franchise of the North Virgina Power Co. was postponed pending further consideration of council committees. R. Gray Williams, D. E. Stultz and A. F. Osborn, representatives of the Power Co., appeared before the council to discuss the advantages of immediate renewal of a long-term franchise. The town has been considering wholesale purchase of electricity from the power company and distribution of the current as a municipal project.

Clarke County CWA Rolls Cut; Paving Sought

Berryville Presses Plea for Work; Jail Begun at Harrisonburg.

Berryville, Va., March 20 (Spl.). The pay roll for CWA projects in Clarke County has been halved following orders to wind up all projects.

Seventy-three men have been dismissed and all new applications for funds have been returned.

One new application, providing for resurfacing Treadwell, Smith, Rice, North Church and South Buckmarsh streets, has been resubmitted to State CWA headquarters following appropriation of $1,034.96 by the town council for materials. This project involves an expenditure of $3,353.66 for 4,250 hours of unskilled labor and 670 hours of skilled labor.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Work on reconstructing the Rockingham County Jail began today and will be completed within four months. The project will cost $32,500, with $10,600 supplied by the PWA.

The interior will include a steel cage which represents most of the expenditure. The new jail will have four stories instead of three and will segregate prisoners in compliance with Federal prison regulations.

The work was delayed several months pending approval of the PWA grant.

Bristol, Va., March 20 (Spl.). With the slackening of CWA help as spring and summer approach, Bristol's unemployed will plant 700 gardens this spring instead of the 425 originally planned, directors said today.

Annapolis Fire Brings $15,000 Loss to Stores

Apartments in Two-Story Structure and Goods Below Ruined.

Annapolis, Md., March 20 (Spl.).—Fire threatened the business section of West street this forenoon when a two-story stucco building containing four stores, with apartments above, was gutted by flames, entailing $15,000 damages.

The three fire companies battled an hour. The blaze started in a partition between the Hygenic Food Store and the Mid-City Pharmacy, and burst through the roof.

Firemen said the blaze was caused by a defective wire or bad flue. The flames were confined to the second floor, but merchandise in the stores below were ruined by smoke and water.

The building is owned by William F. Stromyer. A bakery conducted by H. F. King adjoins the food store, while B. F. Britton's meat and grocery store adjoins the pharmacy, whose proprietor, Dr. Hopkins, and family lived in one apartment. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong lived in the other. Contents of these apartments were ruined.

"Vintage" Cigars like "Vintage" Wines . . . are richer, mellower

So it is with tobaccos. One year's crop will be vastly better than the next—from the same fertile fields.

That is why the General Cigar Company buys only "Vintage" filler tobaccos for White Owl Cigars.

As an example, in 1930, the Ohio filler tobacco lands produced fine, "Vintage" tobaccos. We purchased only Grade A tobacco from that crop.

Next year, abundant rainfall and fine weather produced a "Vintage" crop in Lancaster County, Pa. Here again, we purchased thousands of pounds of Grade A tobacco—and only the Grade A tobacco—for White Owl fillers.

Look for the Grade A "Vintage" Band

Now White Owl Cigars in Washington carry a Grade A "Vintage" band. It is your guarantee that the filler tobaccos are the pick of the best American crops . . . from "Vintage" years. It means that White Owls are milder.

Now you can pay five cents for a cigar and know what you're smoking . . . a White Owl "Vintage" Cigar.

How White Owl Smokers are Protected

THE General Cigar Co., through a 10-year-old Crop Control System, knows the condition of tobacco-growing districts in Pennsylvania and Ohio—the two states which produce nearly all United States cigar filler tobaccos. The amount of rainfall . . . of sunshine . . . the condition of the soil—are all recorded. From these records, it is possible to forecast every "Vintage" crop . . . and only tobaccos from such crops are purchased for White Owls.

But "Vintage" Crops alone are not enough. Under the control system—all filler tobaccos are classified into seven grades. Only the top three grades pass White Owl's strict requirements. That's why we can truthfully say—White Owls are made only from Grade A "Vintage" filler tobaccos.

At the present moment, there is enough Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco aging in our warehouses to make over 1 billion White Owls—more than a three-year supply. That is why White Owl never has to use non-vintage filler tobaccos.

Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco is aged from 2 to 4 years—an average of 3 years.

Today we are using in the filler of White Owls two famous "Vintage" crops . . . the 1931 Pennsylvania and the 1930 Ohio. Look for the Grade A "Vintage" Band.

Perilous Labor Issue Is Faced By Roosevelt

By Raymond Clapper.

In intervening in the automobile strike threat, President Roosevelt has elected to grapple with the most bitter issue between management and labor—that of the company or inside union versus the outside union.

Labor's indictment of company unions long has been a bitter one. But it is even more so in the case of motor manufacturers because company unions have sprung up in the Detroit area since NRA was established like toadstools after a rain. Labor regards them as attempted evasions of the collective bargaining guaranteed under section 7a of the recovery act.

Reasons why labor regards these company unions as tools of the management rather than vehicles of employe representation were detailed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday.

Cites Specific Example.

He alleged that as a typical instance one company had drawn by-laws for its company union plan; that the company paid for time of employe representatives spent in conferences; that the company arranged for quarters for meetings of the works conference; that the company paid the expenses of the secretary who kept the minutes of the meetings; that the company union plan contained a provision that no amendments could be made to it except by unanimous agreement of the works conference and the plant manager. Green alleged that this constituted a ready-made plan handed to the employes. All of which, Green felt, constituted coercion.

One union official testified he was discharged for insubordination, the charge being he had broken a company rule against soliciting on company property when he spent his lunch hour urging fellow workers to join the outside union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Members of grievance committees for outside unions were laid off, it was testified. One employe, an official of an outside union, when laid off carried his case to the regional Labor Board and his reinstatement was ordered but he said he had not been put back to work.

Employers Have Grievance.

One company letter urging employes to join the company union stated "we have made this plan your plan" and promised that no dues would be required—a point about which outside union leaders are particularly sensitive.

On the other side of the picture, the management feels just as bitter about outside unions. Employers naturally would prefer to bargain with their own employes rather than an agent sent from Washington headquarters of the A. F. of L. They assert that outside organizers are trying to strong-arm employes to join, intimidating the men and their families and establishing dominating of the federation over the industry.

Management generally feels that there has been a good deal of racketeering in many labor organizations.

An organization called the "Lexington Avenue Civic Association" is mailing out reprints of an article on labor racketeering whic happeared in "The Nation" last August. This article tells of one union official whose record, if correctly recited, entitles him to a place on the roll of fame above that of Capt. Kidd.

Salary Reported as $21,800.

His salary was reported to be $21,800 a year. Over a five-year period he was "voted gifts" by his union totaling $55,000. Three weeks after the last "gift" of $25,000 was voted, the official announced his union was broke.

Heads of other unions, many of whose members went jobless for months were drawing salaries of $14,000 to $18,000. One was allowed all necessary expenses plus $12 a day for other expenses. Some union officials are allowed $30 to $50 a month for upkeep of automobiles "given" to them by their unions.

These are undoubtedly the blacker strokes in the picture. But they have been influential in increasing the hostile feeling among managements toward outside labor organizations. Real leaders of the labor movement, men like William Green an dEdward McGrady, recognize that racketeers within the union movement are mong its worst enemies. By and large, the leaders of the American Federation of Labor have the confidence of the Administration.

will be received gloriously in the United States."

He added that Mrs. Insull and the lawyers maintained close touch with the fugitive—whom American authorities seek for trial on embezzlement and larceny charges—by a special code.

When the Maiotis put out from Piraeus early Sunday after the government had recalled her from a first dash, the captain indicated the destination would be some place beyond the Suez Canal.

May Be Headed West.

But the time when she would have crossed the eastern Mediterranean ship lanes passed without reports of being sighted, and the belief that a journey westward would facilitate a reunion with Mrs. Insull strengthened a rumor that the ship's course had been changed.

It was learned that a representative in London is directing the 74-year-old fugitive's efforts to escape American authorities, and that Insull is communicating with his London lawyers by a special wireless code.

Rumors were that the Maiotis might head for Monaco or Albania, or, less likely, the International port Port Said, at the head of the Suez of Tangiers.

No word had been received in Canal, of the approach of the Maiotis toward that place, one dispatch reported.

Mrs. —— Davidovici, described as a Rumanian dentist. She was said to have been in charge of centralizing the gang's mail service.

The confessions of the Switzes may bring them leniency, it was indicated by their attorneys. Under the statute of 1886, a sentence of five years may be imposed on them.

Their attorneys may even demand immunity for them under an old law granting freedom in exchange for voluntary denunciation of persons guilty of espionage against the state.

Among the documents found today, made possible by the confessions, were said to be a complete industrial plan of the Paris region, together with a plan to mobilize industry in time of war. The secret police declared the map showed every factory, with an explanation of the nature of its products.

The gang's funds appeared unlimited. Agents were said to have paid generously for documents supplied by Frenchmen employed by the Navy, and the powder, gas and other military services. Just what the spies did with their information remained conjectural, although the police claimed they were gathering arms data for Germans and Russians.

Embassy Keeps Hands Off.

Paris, March 20 (U.P.).—The United States Embassy here, reporting developments to the Department of State, had made no effort to communicate with Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Switz.

Embassy officials, however, have kept in touch with the young couple's lawyers. Many friends of the Switzes in the United States have appealed to the embassy to intervene, but officials have maintained a "hands-off" attitude.

The couple themselves never asked for help from the embassy although the consular authorities in Paris several times asked them if they needed aid.

Druggist Scouts Rumor That He Aided Insull

Chicago, March 20 (A.P.).—Constantine S. Eftax, former Chicago druggist once thought to have acted for Samuel Insull in transferring funds to Greece, returned from Greece today and denied that he even knew Insull.

Eftax, it was alleged in Federal Court proceedings, had a $100,000 account in the Harris Trust & Savings Bank and Samuel Ettelson, attorney for some of the creditors in the Insull bankruptcies, seeking to find allegedly hidden assets, asserted that this account had served as a cover for Insull's transfers of money to Greece. The charge was not proved and the attachment was dissolved.

"Sam Ettelson," said Eftax, "has one grand imagination. How could I, a former West Side druggist, mix with people like Samuel Insull?"

Custis Children's Paintings, Long Lost, Now on Show Here

Two famous portraits of George Washington's stepchildren, missing for nearly a century, have turned up at the Smithsonian Institution.

Painted 162 years ago at Mount Vernon by Charles Willson Peale, famous artist, who also painted Washington, the miniatures of Martha Washington's children are in excellent condition.

A note in Gen. Washington's account book, dated May 30, 1772, shows that he paid Mr. Peale 13 pounds each for the artist's work.

The miniatures were of Martha (Patty) Custis and John Parke Custis. Martha was 17 at the time. She died the next year. John died in 1781 from illness contracted in service at the siege of Yorktown.

The portraits remained in the Custis and Lee families and various copies were made of them. But the location of the originals was unknown for a long time.

An individual who desires to remain unknown, brought them to Ruel T. Tolman, head of the division of graphic arts of the Smithsonian, with the request that the artist be identified.

After considerable investigation, Mr. Tolman was convinced that they were the long lost miniatures of the Mount Vernon children.

Girls A. A. U. Tourney May Include 50 Teams

Wichita, Kans., March 20 (A.P.).—At least 32 of the Nation's outstanding girl basket ball teams will compete in the National A. A. U. tournament here next week for the championship now held by the Oklahoma City Cardinals.

Tournament officials said today they had hoped to limit the entries to 32, but that more than 50 clubs already had made application and it may be necessary to raise the limit.

In addition to the official two-division competition, a special exhibition flight, composed of teams using men's rules, will be added. This flight will be restricted to eight teams.

Mexican divorces do not always require residence or even personal appearances. For a satisfactory fee, persons can be found who undertake to fix everything up by mail. Such divorces, if uncontested, are sometimes valid.

There is something new in decoration. The Gulistan looms, famous for Oriental reproductions, have made some of the most beautiful modern rugs we have seen. These "Newtone" rugs create an effect reminiscent of expensive hand-hooked rugs—a plain shade effect, enriched by a pattern worked out in relief. The colors are refreshingly new—platinum gray or gold for the bedroom — acquamarine green, black, cedar, tete de negre, and many others for the living room.

Virginian Ends Second Decade As Councilman

W. S. Chesley Will Retire at Fredericksburg in June Voting.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—W. S. Chesley, president of the City Council and second ranking member in point of service, with 20 years to his record, has announced he will not be a candidate for reelection in June.

John F. Gouldman, jr., is the only member outranking Mr. Chesley in point of time. He took office on September 1, 1912 to begin a service of 22 years.

A prominent business man here since 1891, when he moved from Stafford County, Mr. Chesley was first elected to the council in June, 1914. He has been president since 1925, when he succeeded Henry Dannehl, who resigned to become police justice.

Mr. Chesley is also Director of Public Safety, and also said he will not be an applicant for another term in that capacity.

W. A. Bell and Cecil L. Reid, other incumbents, have made no announcement but Edwin A. Gibson has announced for an upper ward seat.

All three lower ward candidates, E. G. Heflin, Claude Parcell and L. G. Roach, are expected to run for reelection. Arthur Smith, who lost by a narrow margin in the last election, also will probably be in the race.

Thieves Thorough In Store Burglary

Smokes, Overalls, Ties and Office Safe Taken.

Staunton, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—It was the whole hog or nothing for thieves who visited the E. M. Mantiply store at Fishersville, leaving few clews.

They dumped cigarettes, ties, overalls and shirts into their automobile, and for good measure threw in the store safe.

Eight miles from scene a farmer yesterday found the safe, rifled of $125. Insurance, store records and other papers in the safe were scattered about the roadway.

Pyne, monarch of Abaca Grotto, of Fredericksburg, and C. W. Jones, first treasurer of the Abaca Grotto, who died September 2, 1933.

Virginia Lodgemen to Participate Wednesday in Ceremonial.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—More than 300 uniformed Grotto members and officers from this city, Washington, and Richmond will parade here tomorrow night in memory of C. W. Jones, first treasurer of Abaca Grotto, and a leader in Virginia masonic activities until his death in September.

Following the parade 35 neophytes of the C. W. Jones class will be inducted into the Abaca Grotto by the Samis Cast of Richmond, in a ceremony directed by Chief Justice George Reinhardt.

Prominent masonic leaders to attend include William Mosely Brown, of Clarendon, a member of Abaca Grotto and Grand Master of Virginia Masons; Edw. J. Libbey, of Washington, past Grand Monarch of the Grottoes of America, and of the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm; and officers of the Samis, Kallipolis, and Abaca Grottoes of Richmond, Washington, and Fredericksburg.

The parade will start from the high school at 8 p. m.

Death Car Driver To Pay $100 Fine

Front Royal, Va., March 20 (Spl.). Trial Justice Walter G. Olmstead yesterday found Garth Payne, of here, guilty of driving while intoxicated and imposed a $100 fine, also a four-month jail sentence, suspended during good behavior.

Payne's car struck a telephone pole on the Winchester road March 11, when Milton Peffer, also of Front Royal, an occupant of the car, was fatally hurt.

The trial was held last Saturday, but Justice Olmstead withheld his decision until yesterday.

Yeggs Crack Safe In Linwood Store

Westminster, Md., March 20 (Spl.). — Using nitro-glycerine, burglars early yesterday morning cracked a small safe in the store of John Drauch at Linwood. They took a small amount of money, merchandise and personal papers.

The papers were returned to Mr. Drauch yesterday by Mrs. John Snyder, of Johnsville, who noticed a car stop near her home early in the morning and one of the occupants place a bundle under a culvert.

Plant Failure Hits Albemarle Relief Program

Situation Is Gravest Yet, Director Warns as CWA Draws to Close.

Charlottesville, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—The Albemarle-Charlottesville joint relief system is confronted today with a graver situation than at any time since the depression began, Miss Dora Beck, welfare superintendent, warned today.

Immediate causes of the situation are: 1. Curtailment of the CWA program. 2. Holding back of Federal emergency relief funds until the State shall make the appropriation demanded. 3. The heavy load which has been thrown upon the welfare office by the closing of the Virginia-Alberene Corporation's plants and quarries at Schuyler.

The big soapstone concern suspended all operations two weeks ago today, and the welfare agency already has added 130 families in the vicinity of Schuyler to its list. Help for others probably will be necessary, Miss Beck said.

The subsistence garden program, which was participated in by 2,200 Albemarle families last year, will be put on again this spring. Miss Beck pointed out that this could not be of assistance before July 1, when garden products begin to mature.

The department obtained approximately $14,000 in its campaign for funds last fall, but can not meet general relief needs in a long-continued emergency, Miss Beck said.

The welfare director said that requests by 150 job seekers in four hours yesterday represent an aspect of the situation to which she does not know the answer.

"I feel sometimes," she said, "as if I'm standing on a rock which is just about ready to tilt over."

Ousted Plot Owner Sues to Recover Portable Cabins

Winchester, Va., March 20 (Spl.). When Judge Philip Williams sits at the April term of Circuit Court of Frederick County here, he must decide portable camp cabins are part of the real estate or are personal property.

The question arose after dispossession of Mrs. Mattie I. Mee from her Appleway Cabin Camp and sale of the real estate. Mrs. Mary E. Barrett bought the tract and took possession of the land and cabins.

Mrs. Mee has entered suit for $2,000, alleging the cabins are portable and can be removed as personal property.

West Virginia Warns Of Scale Racketeers

Charleston, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Merchants and other business men of the State are warned in an official bulletin issued by C. L. Jarrett, State commissioner of labor, to beware of persons falsely representing themselves to be State inspectors of weights and measures.

A racket is being worked on merchants of the State. Jarrett states, by which they are being forced to pay a cash penalty under threats of prosecution following examinations of scales.

Farmers Fight West Virginia Gas Tax Action

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Farmers and orchardists in this section of West Virginia were making organized protest today to the West Virginia Legislature.

They protest the State Senate's action in eliminating the exemption which farmers and fruitgrowers have had from the State gasoline tax on gasoline purchases used entirely in farm machinery.

Since the tax was designed exclusively to pay for roads, and since farm gasoline is not used on public roads, agriculturists were granted exemption. The Senate bill abolishes this.

Not only in gasoline and motor oil does this affect the orchardist. Engine oil within the past several years has come to be the foundation of one of the major early spray materials used here. Thousands of gallons of motor oil are used in spraying. The road-building tax of 4 cents per gallon on this heretofore has been refunded. Under the Senate bill this immunity is ended.

The bill if passed by House of Delegates and signed by the Governor will cost orchardists here several hundred dollars yearly.

18 County Jurists Lose Jobs June 30

Norfolk Judges' Records Probed in "Road Trials."

Norfolk, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Eighteen Norfolk County justices of the peace will lose their jobs June 30 when the new law providing for one trial magistrate becomes effective.

State auditors are now examining the books of the magistrates and investigating complaints from a number of truck drivers and motorists who claim they were given roadside trials for alleged violations of traffic laws, fined, but obtained no receipts for the money they paid.

"Roadside" trials have been reported in Norfolk and Princess Anne Counties. Despite the auditors' investigations, R. A. Cordell, county magistrate, announces his candidacy for trial justice. This position will be filled by appointment by Judge C. W. Coleman of the Norfolk County Circuit Court. A number are expected to seek the new position, which will be one of the best-paying of its kind in the State.

Robinson Lays Air Mail Fraud To Hoover Aid

master General Walter F. Brown. The record he cited showed both worked to help the Pittsburgh company benefit from an air-mail contract.

When Senator Fess (Republican), Ohio, chief defender of the air-mail contracts, interrupted the Democratic leader to suggest that he had presented "the best defense the Postoffice Department can send up here for cancellation of the contracts," Senator Robinson heatedly turned on him and asserted he had not been in communication with the Postoffice Department.

He said documents which he cited had been gathered for him by the clerk of the Black committee and he angrily told the Ohioan that "If the Senator thinks he can make progress with that kind of an insinuation he is mistaken."

Later Senator Fess made a lengthy defense of the Mellon participation in the Pittsburgh airline's affairs and of Brown's administration of the mail contracts. He said the Mellons owned only 2,400 of 26,000 shares of this company's stock.

Mrs. Putnam Testifies.

He denied that there had been any fraud in the awarding of the mail contracts and charged the Democrats with trying to convict Hoover officials with "innuendo" and by "impugning their motives." He challenged the Administration to place charges of fraud against Brown and let the courts decide the issue.

Shortly before this heated scene took place on the Senate floor Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, who made a solo flight across the Atlantic, told the Senate Postoffice and Post Roads Committee that in framing new air-mail legislation, care should be taken not to restrict the development of aviation.

She said Congress at this time should act on a "broad program" as speedily as possible. For the present she thought it necessary for aviation to be subsidized for carrying air mail, but said that later on contracts might be abandoned and the airlines paid reasonable charges for mail transportation.

The Senate committee concluded its hearings on the bill yesterday. In another day or two it will meet in executive session to revise the measure, which has been criticized in some aspect or another by virtually every witness who has appeared.

At the same time in another room the Black committee was obtaining further details on the manner in which contracts were awarded during the previous Administration. The witnesses were John B. Kohler, president of the Kohler Aviation Co. of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Harry P. Williams, of the Wedell-Williams Aviation Co. of Patterson, La.

Kohler Hired Lobbyist.

The Kohler company after trying to get a contract for two years was awarded a subcontract to fly mail between Grand Rapids and Milwaukee two days before the Hoover regime ended. Senator Black brought out that Kohler had sent a "Judge Backus" to Washington to see President Hoover to get the company a contract. Kohler said he had no knowledge that Judge Backus—whose first name he was not sure of—had seen the former President.

Williams told the committee he had been unable to get for his company a contract in combination with the Robertson Airlines on the St. Louis-New Orleans route.

After his company lost out on the St. Louis-New Orleans contract, Williams explained, Brown assured him that something would be worked out elsewhere.

"Some of these communications," Senator Robinson said of the Mellon air firm, "are couched in such language as to indicate that performance of civic duties was not the primary motive, but that control of aviation in Pennsylvania and procurement of a profitable part of a transcontinental air mail contract were the undoubted objects to be accomplished."

Mellons Highly Interested.

The Democratic leader pointed out that Richard K. Mellon served on the executive committee of the air company, that he and W. L. Mellon were directors of the company and that both were actively interested in the company's affairs.

In addition, Senator Robinson said, the chairman of the aviation company was George S. Davison who also was president of the Mellon controlled Gulf Refining Co. and that W. L. Clause, chairman of the board of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.—also largely owned by the Mellons—was another director. Frank A. Leovy, a director of the Gulf Oil Co. also was on the board of the airline as was H. D. Rust, president of the Koppers Co., another Mellon enterprise, Senator Robinson said.

Senator Robinson quoted a number of documents to substantiate his contentions, including a letter written on official stationery of the Secretary of the Treasury by A. W. Mellon to A. L. Humphrey, chairman of the airline's executive committee under date of December 4, 1930, asserting he had discussed the matter of an air-mail contract with Brown at the Cabinet meeting that morning.

Army Sought To Oust Him, Says CCC Chief

Fechner Tells Committee "I Wouldn't Go Along With Them."

Testimony that "the general staff tried to run me off the job because I wouldn't go along with what they wanted me to do" was given the House Military Affairs Investigating Committee yesterday by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work.

"I have reason to feel that they resented things Assistant Secretary of War Woodring wanted done," the CCC head testified. "That is my personal belief and feeling."

Questioned by Chairman Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, Fechner modified his statement to say it might have been the Quartermaster Corps which desired his removal.

The committee heard Fechner testify regarding purchases for the Civilian Conservation Corps, in connection with its investigation of alleged "profiteering and irregularities" in War Department expenditures.

Differences of opinion between the Quartermaster Corps and the office of the Assistant Secretary of War were described by the witness, but nothing developed to elaborate his earlier testimony before the House Appropriations Committee until he concluded with the assertion that an attempt had been made "to run me off the job."

Fechner declined to explain further, and members of the committee indicated the matter would be gone into when officers of the Quartermaster Corps are called.

In executive session, the investigators heard E. L. Slaggie, discharged after three years' service as projection engineer at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, tell of Army Air Corps procurement methods under the negotiated contract system in vogue since 1926.

Poland Is Expected To Abandon Gold Soon

Warsaw, March 20 (U.P.).—President Ignacy Moscicki soon will declare the gold clause invalid on all outstanding Polish dollars and sterling obligations, with exception of the so-called stabilization loan floated in the United States in 1927, it was reported reliably today.

The president recently was granted powers to take such action. In addition to foreign credits, debts between Polish nationals contracted in terms of dollars and sterling would be affected.

The religious ceremony was to be performed tonight.

Denounces New Measure as Vigorously as Original.

Fletcher-Rayburn bill as damaging alike to the security business, the investor and to commerce, was no less vigorous in his condemnation of the revised bill.

He said the modifications worked out after a week's consultation with representatives of the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Trade Commission and other Administration spokesmen, meet none of the widespread objections to the first draft.

Instead of giving the Federal Reserve Board broad power to control margins, he charged "the bill contains rigid and complicated margin requirements which will be either prohibitive or overly liberal, depending on the course of prices.

"These arbitrary provisions can be made more severe by the Federal Reserve Board, but can be lowered only in extraordinary circumstances," he said.

Rules Called Complicated.

Other arguments advanced by Whitney against the redraft were:

That regulation of the functions of broker and dealer have been made more complicated, but not materially changed, except affecting persons in the business of distributing securities.

That provisions affecting odd-lot dealers, broker-specialists and dealer-specialists, rather than permit a normal functioning if these systems, "will abolish odd-lot dealers on most exchanges and specialists on all exchanges."

That the Federal Trade Commission still would have power to "dominate" corporations filing registration statements, by controlling accounting methods and compelling submission of reports.

That Federal Reserve Board credit control and limitations on "unfair" civil penalties represent "steps in the right direction," but the underlying purpose of the bill still is "to carry out the social theories of those who believe the Federal Government should control not only credit and the operation of stock exchanges, but also commerce and industry."

Urges Bill Be Read.

He concluded with a plea for "everybody who is interested in American business" to read the bill.

Whitney recently offered both House and Senate committees his own plan for stock market supervision. He proposed a regulatory body of seven members, two appointed by the President, two Cabinet officers, one appointed by the Federal Reserve Open Market Committee and two representatives of stock exchanges. The board would have authority to regulate the amount of margins and require exchanges to adopt regulations.

Before the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday, Corcoran declared that destructive liquidation of accounts, which critics charged would be brought about by the old bill, could not occur under the new measure.

Terming Federal Reserve power to lower margins under the revised draft an "escape valve," he described liberalization of margin requirements and revised regulations affecting segregation of brokers and dealers as the two principle modifications. He conceded it would be "very difficult" for the Federal Reserve Board to lower margins under the provision.

Schipa Shows Greater Power, Finer Control

Brilliant Tenor Pleases Capital Audience by Suave Treatment.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Tito Schipa afforded his auditors in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon an enjoyable span of lyric artistry. His control of tone and his delicacies of phrasing show no sign of the strain which his operatic performances and his concert tours have of necessity put upon his voice for the last decade. No better proof could be adduced that he knows how to sing without forcing the physical instrument.

As an exponent of bel canto, that method of producing pure tone with ease and accuracy, Signor Schipa has few peers these days. One has but to listen to the perfected skill with which he diminishes a full and open tone to the last attenuation to realize the mastery of breath which this entails. He holds the vocal line with absolute eveness while the volume of sound narrows to the verge of extinction.

In the production of robust and sonorous tones, his vice has gained power during recent years, without losing its flexibility or its velvety texture. His lyricism has retained its dulcet quality, while his dramatic forcefulness has broadened.

His opening group contained songs by Luporini and Scarlatti, an arietta from Wolf-Ferrari's "Le Donne Curiose" and "Una Furtiva Lagrima" from Donizetti's "L'Elisir d'Amore." As an extra number he gave a Venetian lullaby by Sodero. His second group, in English, contained four lyrics by Furgluele, Walter Kramer, Katherine Lockhart Manning and Richard Hageman. He was obliged to repeat the Manning "In the Luxembourg Gardens," and when he was recalled he responded generously with two Neapolitan songs.

In his concluding group were Rimski-Korsakoff's "The Nightingale," sung in Russian; Bellini's "Carovana nella Notte," Mancini's "Esperanza" and his own "Serenata Matutina." To these he added "Princesita," "La donn' en mobile" and "O Sole Mio."

Julian Huarte provided expert and discreet accompaniments, finely adjusted to the singer's needs. As an assisting artist he demonstrated interesting pianistic qualities in the "Granada" of Albeniz and his own "Spanish Dance." These were colorful and rhythmically subtle. In his treatment of Chopin, as exemplified in the D flat major and A flat major preludes, he was not so satisfying.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Visits Uncle Joe

IT was nearly dark when Jay Bird whizzed up to Blackie's house, and he found Blackie sitting on his step, with his chin in his paws, and looking tired and worried.

"What's the matter, old neighbor? You don't look happy," said Jay Bird.

"And I don't feel any happier than I look," Blackie said. "Nobody can be happy when he is so hungry he could eat a rattlesnake. If you want me to look happy, tell me where I can get a supper without getting some shot thrown in with it."

"And I am going to tell you just that," Jay Bird said. "A big, red rooster that lives over at Uncle Joe's house just now took a mighty good bear supper up in the big walnut tree and settled it down on a limb where it is going to stay all night."

"You are wrong about the 'all night' part of your story. He may sleep there a part of the night, but I'll bet you a gooseberry pie for Sunday dinner that he won't sleep there all night. Better spend the night with me, and I'll show you what nice feathers grow on Uncle Joe's roster. I won't be gone long."

Uncle Joe Working.

That afternoon Uncle Joe had been working in his garden, hauling leaves and things in his wheelbarrow. When he quit, he piled some boxes and his hoe and shovel and rake on his wheelbarrow and rolled it just through the gate and left it there.

When Blackie dashed for the gate he didn't see the wheelbarrow, and so he butted into it so hard that the boxes and hoe and shovel and everything went flying out against the fence, and such a racket you never heard. The wheelbarrow turned over on Blackie, and one of his feet got caught in the wheel, and one of the handles fell across his neck. The noise he made woke up the dog and every other animal on the place, and you never heard such a racket as they made. The donkey said "He-haw, hee-haw, hee-haw," so loud you could have heard him a mile, and Blackie would tell you till this day that no cow ever made more noise than Uncle Joe's cow made that night.

Wheelbarrow Disliked.

All this time Blackie was down on his back with the wheelbarrow on top of him, and if ever a bear tried to get loose from anything, Blackie was trying to get away from that wheelbarrow.

About the time Uncle Joe got out of his front door, Blackie worked loose from the wheelbarrow. When he kicked it off of him, it struck the gate and made so much noise that Uncle Joe came running around the house to see what it was. Blackie saw him coming with his gun and lantern, and he knew he couldn't get out through the gate, so he turned and started out licketysplit down the garden toward the woods.

Just as he hit the ground on the other side of the fence, Uncle Joe's gun went "Pow! Pow!" and one of the shot just nicked his ear. Talk about running! Well, I tell you Blackie ran so fast that he just made a black streak through the woods all the way to his house, and now Blackie hates a wheelbarrow about as bad as anything in the world, for besides making him lose his supper, it came mighty near making him lose his skin.

BUGABOO!

We love showing up a "bugaboo" for what it is! Take this mistaken idea that "Foreign Exchanges" will make a trip to Europe this year cost more. Nothing is farther from the truth. The facts are that steamship fares are down 30%, railroad rates 30%, hotel costs 36%. If you wish, you may buy your complete European Tour in American Dollars before you start and also get the advantage of these reductions.

As an example, a 30-day tour of Europe, crossing via Cunard Cabin Service, today will cost you 23% less than in 1926, President Roosevelt's "Year of Normalcy."

Reduced round-trip rates are as low as $234 Cabin, $188 Tourist. Your local agent or our nearest branch office will be glad to plan your individual itinerary. Cunard Line, 1504 K St. N.W., Wash., D. C.

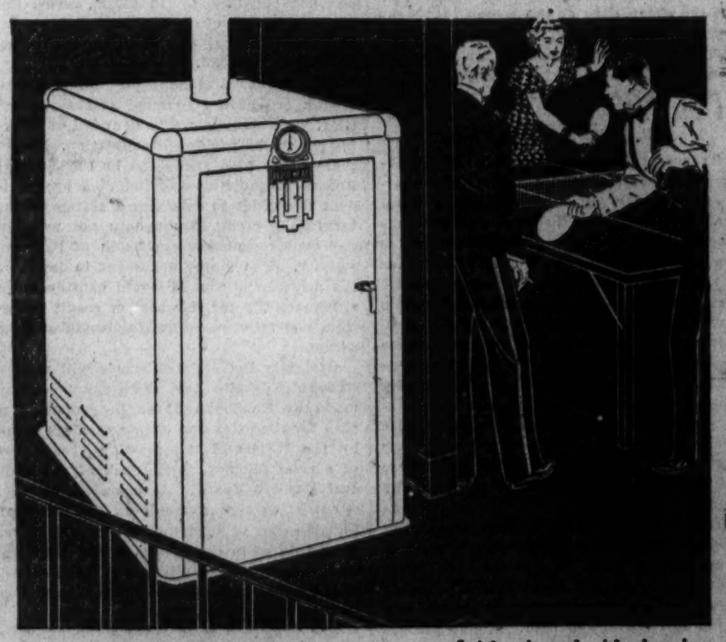
IT'S A DELCO HEAT!

AND IT'S A COMPLETE, HARMONIZED HEATING PLANT IN A TRIM, COMPACT CABINET



The handsome, furniture-steel cabinet in two-tone finish, trimmed with chromium

Of course you've heard about Delco Heat. Fresh from the Delco Laboratories only a few years ago, it has already become the sensation of the oil burner industry. And now there's a new Delco Heat—a complete all-in-one heating plant that is a modern marvel in heating efficiency and fuel economy.

Uses less oil

There's no wasted oil. Combustion is complete. For instead of mixing cold air with the oil, the perfected pressure-type burner receives preheated air—combines it with oil in a misty spray... then turns this mist into a radiant flame that throws off intense heat.

The time-proved up-draft system makes the most efficient use of the rising heat. Then the intense heat generated in the combustion chamber is utilized to the last possible degree by specially designed fins that reach out, absorb the heat and conduct it directly to the water in the boiler. And what a difference that makes in sending all available heat upstairs!

Fuel savings up to 50%

We don't have to tell you that the materials used are the best and that every point of design has been thoroughly tested and proved. You know that Delco has seen to that. To cite one example, the insulation on the boiler is almost two inches thick!

With this type of insulation, with an unusually large interior surface to absorb all possible heat, and with a positive Fuel Control to measure the flow of oil—here is a heating plant from which you can expect amazing economy. Tests show savings of as much as 50% over other methods.

You'll want to know more about this Delco Heat harmonized heating plant. You'll want to know how it burns the cheapest grade of domestic fuel oil—how it supplies an abundance of hot water winter and summer—how easily it can be installed—how it can be bought on exceptionally liberal terms. Telephone or call for this information today.

Heat rises... Delco Heat even improves on this!

Delco Heat takes advantage of all the natural laws of heat travel and heat radiation. It doesn't force the heat but scientifically controls its travel upward ...retains all possible heat for the home.

Good Theater.

Although this is probably playing right into the hands of his publicity agent, we can not help saying bravo to Leopold Stokowsky. As usual, his staging is just right. If the story had come from any town other than Philadelphia—from liberal Baltimore, for instance—the effect would have been completely lost.

Despite protests loud and long the director of the Philadelphia Orchestra is going to play the "Internationale" at his next children's concert. Yes, when next Philadelphia's youth gathers in the auditorium the insipid strains of the hymn of the toilers of the Soviet will greet its ears. Sincerely we hope none will be corrupted, that the children will not storm Rittenhouse Square, waving red banners, hurling bricks.

Patriotic societies arose in wrath when the plan was announced. Perhaps Stokowsky knew they would. Anyway, the bait was neatly nibbled and he got the headlines again, though not as conspicuously as would have been the case in our more unregenerate days. But we can not say that we are quite so happy over the director's compromise with Philadelphia's outraged feelings. He will print the corrupting words of the song in French, a language competent to make any ribaldry sound attractive. Is it implied that the young lady from Philadelphia doesn't read French anymore?

Mussolini Follows Through.

Having swallowed two mice, in the shape of the treaties with Austria and Hungary, Signor Mussolini did not emulate the cat who lay down for a justified snooze. Instead, he proceeded to give assurance that for the time being, at least, he was not looking for any more mice, though quite able to take care of them and larger animals when necessary.

His speech Sunday, in which Il Duce outlined the "60-year Plan" for Italy, at the end of which she would have world "primacy," revealed him in a generous and benevolent mood toward his neighbors. He sought to reassure France by saying that Italy's future does not lie in the west and that she wants only "natural expansion," not territorial conquest, in Northern Africa. Germany was told, in effect, that as long as the Nazis keep out of southern Europe, they may have, as far as Italy is concerned, the full national equality denied by the peace treaty. Even Yugoslavia, with whom relations have not been so good, was given a friendly pat and the assurance that Italy wants a peaceful Adriatic. Having driven his own wedge, the Italian Premier was careful to show that it need not worry others—or at least none other than France.

The wedge is, of course, aimed to split the languishing French hegemony in eastern Europe, substituting for it an Italian hegemony. The Danube basin is a good place to begin. The two countries in the basin which are not in alliance with France are the sharp edge of the wedge. And the alarmed reaction in Paris is the best illustration that Mussolini's bid for European leadership is taken very seriously.

Air Mail By Express.

Transportation of air mail in bulk packages over commercial lines is a logical outgrowth of the difficulties resulting from the cancellation of private air-mail contracts. Many business establishments have come to rely upon the air mail as a means of rapid communication. They were greatly perturbed when the task of carrying this mail was turned over to the Army. Indications are, however, that many of these concerns made use of the Army service until President Roosevelt temporarily stopped all air-mail operations. The practice of sending air-mail letters in express packages to be posted at or near their destination was widely adopted only after other means of rapid communication by mail had failed.

Assistant Postmaster General Branch has declared that the transportation of mail in this manner must be stopped, but there seems to be no law forbidding the use of commercial airplanes for this purpose, provided full postage is paid. Under present circumstances it would be unreasonable to enact such a law. The Postoffice Department has failed to maintain a service which the public has come to regard as essential. It is up to that department to see that adequate service is provided rather than to protest when private agencies find a way to mitigate the hardships resulting from Postmaster General Farley's ill-advised policy.

Of course, the shipment of air mail as express does not afford a solution for the air-mail problem. This means of carrying letters and packages is practical only for institutions or business concerns sending out a large volume of mail. But it does illustrate the indispensability of the system that is being so carelessly destroyed. Likewise it emphasizes the necessity of early and honest admission of the blunder that has been made.

Opposition On Principle?

Hearings before the Ways and Means Committee of the House served only to crystallize an arbitrary partisan division on the pending tariff legislation. The measure, which would authorize the President to alter present schedules within a 50 per cent limit, was reported out of committee last Friday on a straight party vote—the 15 Democrats favoring and the 10 Republicans opposed. A similar division is predicted after consideration of the measure on the floor of the House, where debate is scheduled to start this week.

The position assumed by the Republicans in this matter was summed up last week by Representative Treadway, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, who was quoted as saying that "no matter how they (the Democrats) amend it, the bill will not be acceptable to the minority." That attitude could be whole-heartedly indorsed only if some historic principle were at issue on which the two parties have ever taken opposing lines. It can perhaps be said that the unusual power which the bill gives to the Executive constitutes such a principle. But if Republicanism is rallying in defense of this cause alone it is a new development and should be advertised as such.

Far from being a measure susceptible of arbitrary partisan opposition, the tariff bill is one in which a relaxation of party lines would more properly be expected. It is, in fact, as integral a part of the recovery program as any of the legislation passed by the emergency session a year ago. And from a purely objective viewpoint it is less subject to criticism than many of the measures then hastily adopted and since amplified and extended.

The starting point for this legislation, of course, is the fact that between 1928 and 1934 our exports declined 52 per cent in terms of volume and 32 per cent in terms of dollars. This loss of markets has been reflected in a domestic oversupply which has helped to force most of the restrictive measures undertaken by the Administration. These foreign markets will not be regained, even in part, without reciprocal negotiations in which the Executive can not engage without a certain authority. Why this authority should be denied at this particular part of the recovery program has not yet been clearly explained. Had it been denied at the outset, the ends of logic would have been much more clearly served.

For this reason, objections to the pending bill should either disprove that it is an integral part of the recovery program as a whole, or should demonstrate that the proposal is not based upon sound reasoning. It is not enough to say that it is inacceptable to the minority without saying specifically why not. There have been many issues, particularly in the field of monetary policy, in which a united opposition would have been of the greatest national service. In the present instance a purely partisan opposition, unless it takes its stand on principles not yet disclosed, will appear to many as being only a selfish grouping of those sectional interests which have done so much to log-roll Congressional tariff-making into disrepute.

Great Expectations.

An alleged shortage of intermediate credits, running from 3 to 5 years, much needed to build up working capital, is said to be retarding recovery. This assertion recalls earlier loud complaints that business was suffering because deserving borrowers had been denied short-term commercial credits customarily obtainable from their banks.

The resultant agitation led to an amendment of the Reserve Act in 1932, permitting individuals and concerns that could prove inability to obtain adequate credits from other banks to borrow directly from the Federal Reserve Banks. As the applicant had to present eligible paper, indorsed and otherwise secured, the amount of credit advanced under this direct loan provision has been negligible. In other words, the assumed dearth of credit was due primarily to a lack of acceptable security, not to unwillingness to lend.

No doubt demands for intermediate credits are harder to meet at the present time, with many concerns denuded of working capital by prolonged depression. Nevertheless, the plan sponsored by the Federal Reserve authorities and indorsed by President Roosevelt to establish a system of intermediate credit banks does not promise any wonder-working expansion of business activity. The major argument in favor of the proposal is that it would provide more systematically for this sort of credit extension, and relieve commercial banks of slow assets.

Certainly industrial miracles will not be wrought, despite the extravagant claims made by Chairman Jones in proposing a plan for the extension of intermediate loans by the RFC and the glowing predictions of a rival planner, Gov. Black of the Federal Reserve Board. As a matter of fact, our existing credit machinery has provided for all forms of needed credit in past years. It will do so in the future, if the Administration will quit making a political football of the banking system and give it a chance to show what it can do.

The first step is to restore the effective functioning of the capital market by modifying the securities act, without removing reasonable safeguards against abuse. If that is done, less will be heard about the shortage of working capital and the deficiencies of the existing banking system. Encouragement will be given to the heavy industries by a revival of investment buying, and idle workers attached to those industries will be reemployed. Already there is abundant evidence that new investment openings are only waiting for the signal to start.

No greater service could be performed in the name of recovery than to take the question of banking and investment operations out of the realm of social and political controversy. Constant extension of governmental financing activities and increasing governmental control of credit policy will only produce a paralysis of private credit activities, which it is the ostensible aim of the Government to stimulate.

What Would Jefferson Say?

Passage of the Bankhead bill by the House is important chiefly as another step in the direction of bureaucratic regimentation for agriculture. A few years ago farmers would have guffawed at any suggestion that the Secretary of Agriculture be given authority to tell them how much cotton they could sell. Congress could not have considered a measure of this kind seriously. Now farmers are clamoring for compulsory reduction of crops, and a vote of 251 to 114 for the Bankhead bill indicates the Congressional attitude.

This legislation confirms the way in which experimentation in State control proceeds, with each new step taking us deeper into an uncertain morass. Last year farmers were paid something over $100,000,000 for plowing under part of their cotton. Distribution of another $130,000,000 for voluntary acreage reduction has now begun. But it is reported that enormous sums are being spent—presumably from these benefit payments—for fertilizer. More cotton on fewer acres appears to be the objective of many farmers who are "cooperating" with the Government's "stabilization" program. In voting to impose a quota upon every cotton farm, and place a prohibitive tax on the ginning of all cotton in excess of the quota allowances, the House is merely taking what it believes to be a necessary step toward correction of weaknesses in the present program.

A piecemeal approach to regimentation, however, does not make the policy more practical nor less obnoxious. The task of allotting quotas to a million farmers on the basis of their past production, which may or may not be recorded, in itself staggers the imagination. Secretary Wallace himself asked the House Agricultural Committee "to envision the complications that would ensue" from claims against the Government by thousands of farmers dissatisfied with their quotas. The extent to which the swollen Department of Agriculture would have to be expanded to handle such claims is only one of the new problems implicit in the Bankhead bill.

Only cotton farmers would be regimented under this particular legislation. But the trend toward a centralized dictatorship in agriculture is unmistakable. A bill for compulsory control over tobacco marketing is already before the House. Extension of equally drastic provisions to wheat and corn is being considered. Moreover, the Senate recently passed a bill to bring seven additional commodities under the agricultural adjustment act.

Federal control over agriculture is being broadened as well as intensified. An attempt is made to justify each new experiment as an essential outgrowth of past measures, or else to meet some new emergency. Even many Administration leaders are assailed by grave misgivings as to the ultimate outcome of this trend. Like Pandora, they realize that it is much easier to open a box of troubles than to confine them again when once released.

Shrine Of The Mighty.

"When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre," Ulysses, King of Ithaca, endeavored to return home from the Trojan War. He was "beset by winds unfavorable." He roamed for years over the Inland Sea, touching with the wand of romance every scene of his involuntary visitations. So wonderful were his Mediterranean wanderings that his Hellenic name of Odysseus has given us a word to describe any long and rhapsodic journey.

Today, over those same waters, behold an American faring forth. His ship, however, is no Grecian galley; it is a chartered cargo steamer. Nor, we may imagine, is Samuel Insull "standing in the prow with fearless eyes. Here is no Ulysses seeking his home after heroic wanderings. Quite to the contrary.

We doubt that this adventure will be sung by any modern poet. Our latter-day wanderer of the Mediterranean is unlikely to meet Circe or rest in a lazy land of Lotus Eaters where it "seems always afternoon." He is already between a Scylla and Charybdis more terrifying than Homer's: the Scylla of a miserable existence at some outpost of civilization; the Charybdis of capture and return for trial in a community which could well say:

"Shrine of the mighty, can it be
That this is all remains of thee?"

An argument is going the rounds as to what is the world's greatest waterfall. We had always thought it was rain.

School for Starlings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The starling dinner enjoyed by Congress recently, as reported in The Post, calls to mind an advertisement in The Spectator, Vol. I, No. 36, April 11, 1711:

"A widow, gentlewoman, well born . . . having been reduced by misfortunes . . . for some time . . . teacher at a boarding school of young ladies, giveth notice to the publick that she hath lately taken a house . . . commodiously situated next the fields in good air; where she teaches all sorts of birds of the loquacious kinds, as parrots, starlings . . . to imitate human voices in greater perfection than ever yet was practiced. They are not only instructed to pronounce words distinctly, and in proper tone and accent, but to speak the language with great purity and volubility of tongue, together with all the fashionable phrases and compliments in use either at tea-table or visiting-days. Those that have good voices may be taught to sing the newest opera airs, and, if required, to speak either Italian or French. . . . As she has observed with much concern how indecent an education is usually given these innocent creatures . . . owing to their being placed in rooms next to the streets where, to the great offense of chaste and tender ears, they learned ribaldry, obscene songs . . . She suffers none to approach them (the birds) but herself, and a servant-maid who is deaf and dumb . . ."

Probably the starlings which had been loafing on the Municipal Building are lineal descendants of graduates of the above mentioned School for Birds, and moved over to the Capitol to be in better company. A SPECTATOR.

Postal "Economies."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Postoffice Department clerks have been told they can take no annual leave but must submit to another furlough. Mr. Farley, in his zeal for economy, reminds one of a former Democratic Postmaster General who dismissed from the service about 10 old men, most of whom were war veterans. There was no provision at that time for retired clerks, and the men were absolutely dependent upon charity. Everyone knows of the odium which will always be associated with that act.

Meddling in Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many friends of President Roosevelt are hopeful that he will soon rid his Administration of Postmaster General Farley. He has meddled in local political affairs, interfered with normal matters that do not concern him and has brought a bitter feeling through his air-mail activities.

Lindbergh is right—no man or company should be accused and convicted without an open trial. A lot of pilots have been killed through Farley's undue haste. The idea seems to be to "show up" somebody to prove how honest he is by demonstrating the dishonesty of others. WALTER O'KEEFE.

Saving Time and Shoe Leather

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A United States information "service" has been established. It is supposed to save the time and shoe leather of the out-of-town business man. Under the old conditions he had to keep up his daily merry-go-round for about a week, though he might have secured what he was after in much less time.

All this is fine, but, no doubt, the hotels and taxi drivers won't like it. These babes from the woods ran up quite sizable bills in their weekly sojourns that helped business and employment. It is the old story. With efficiency installed, the wheels go round faster, but not so many wheels are needed. F. V.

It Is to Laugh!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Representatives who voted for the bonus measure are perfectly aware that they are safe in doing so, as it will be promptly turned down by the Senate and the President. But, of course, the Congressional lawmakers who are attempting to pull the wool over the eyes of their constituents can at the next elections remind the army of bonus voters that "we" voted for the brave boys! I wonder if the men will be fooled? It is to laugh!

Centralization of Power.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The theory that if the Government "took over" the railroads, the public utilities, as well as the air mails and everything else something approaching an industrial millennium would occur is altogether unsound. Graft rears its ugly head in governmental, as in private enterprise. At least "private" business can be "watched," but who can keep an eye on National affairs, when those in power are authorized to "muzzle" everything and everybody? The French revolution came about because of governmental corruption and the centralization of power, as did the fall of Rome. E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

From a Disabled Officer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The morning mail brought my Pennsylvania bonus check for $200. It looked like a million dollars and will enable me to pay the back taxes on my heavily mortgaged home.

Retired emergency officers with less service, less service-connected disability, less rank and in less need than I receive checks for similar amounts from the Government every month. I wonder why our Government so richly rewards some and by an arbitrary and unjustifiable time limit on application for emergency officers' retirement excludes others who were too seriously disabled in the service of their country to gather in those benefits while the going was good.

TOTALLY DISABLED EMERGENCY OFFICER.

The New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is my opinion that politics and nothing but politics is being played by the House in connection with the independent offices appropriation bill. It is very significant that the Senate, where there are only 96 men, the majority of whom have years ahead to serve before they again take up the battle for reelection, know clearly what to do and go ahead and do it in spite of all Administration opposition, as was shown in the liberalizing of veterans' benefits and voting for full restoration of Government salaries. In contrast to this clearness of action, the House responds in a faltering, undecided, hesitating manner, instilled with fear—fear that if they don't do as the Administration dictates to them they will not be sitting on the band wagon when reelection comes around—as the Administration will see to that.

In times of war, patriotism is demanded of the people by the politicians—in times like these, where patriotism should be given the people by the politicians, the people get politics. FRED J. CALVERT.

The Female of the Species.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No surer evidence of a weak and effeminate manhood is apparent than is seen in the supineness of the male sex in encouraging the placing of women in occupations once wholly within man's domain.

Woman's place is in the home. Nature placed her there, and all the assumed wisdom of feminists, male or female, can not create a different situation that will remain permanent.

Woman suffrage was one of the silliest fads ever "put over" upon a suspecting people, even in this silly age. Disgusting as is much that has already taken place, it is as nothing compared with what is likely to follow as the years go by. OBSERVER.

Munitions Investigation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I tell you with what appreciation I read your editorial regarding the proposed munitions investigation? I hope The Post will continue to push for a complete investigation of this racket which traffics around the world.

I am writing for myself personally, but I should like to say that as chairman of the interracial committee of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, I know I am voicing their approval also of this editorial.

A SUPREME COURT FOR FRANCE.

A high compliment was paid to the United States Supreme Court the other day in the French Parliament. The occasion was the first session of the Chamber of Deputies in 1934; the speaker was the dean of that body, Henri Constant Groussau, now 83 years old.

Called on to preside, the veteran legislator asked his colleagues to pass a bill that would provide France with a supreme judicial body similar to the Supreme Court of the United States, which he described as "the champion of constitutional liberty." He reminded the chamber that he introduced such a measure just 30 years ago, and expressed his regret that "France has neither a supreme court nor even constitutional guarantees."

The French judicial system, on which Deputy Groussau would superimpose a supreme court, is by nature quite different from that of the United States. In the first place, there is no reference to it in the constitution of France, which was adopted so recently as 1875. All French courts, except the impeachment court into which the upper branch of the Parliament may resolve itself, are based on statute. In the second place, the popular French view has been that the judiciary is a part of the executive department and not endowed with the right to declare acts of the legislative department invalid.

The result is that the French judiciary has developed only as permitted by the Parliament. There are two sets of courts. The ordinary courts handle civil and criminal cases. The administrative courts, which are under the direction of the ministry of the interior, have charge of litigation arising from disputes between citizens and the officers of the government. The Conseil d'Etat, or Council of State, with its 50 or more members, which stands at the top of the administrative courts, is a final tribunal only for administrative controversies.

While this system has worked well in protecting the rights of French citizens under the law as against undue invasions by officers in the highly bureaucratic government, it had not provided the final judicial authority which the American people rely on and which some of the newer republics, including Czechoslovakia and Spain, have incorporated in their governments.

The Post Impressionist

Otto For Short

Postoffice, Wednesday.

"The Emperor and Empress were on the private wharf. A speedboat dashed by. The exhaust sounded like a machine gun. The Empress ran to me. She was thinking of her eldest son, but, for all her agitation, she spoke of him formally: 'They may land and attack!' she cried. 'Where is His Imperial Highness?' That is all there is of the incident, but it shows clearly how the Empress thought."

Our informant was a cross between a child's governess and a lady-in-waiting. The place of which she was talking was that waterside chateau on Lac Leman, where exiled Napoleon III once lived. There, at the time she was talking about, lived Charles Francis, then exiled Emperor of Austria-Hungary. And she was talking of his wife and his eldest son, Francis Joseph Otto, whose first name has lately been in every newspaper as that of a young man not unlikely to reoccupy at least one of the thrones so long held by his ancestors.

There is no older royal house in Europe than the Hapsburgs. This Otto is the twenty-second in descent from Guntram the Rich, who founded the family a century before his great-grandson built, on the River Aar, that "Hawk's Castle" whence the clan derives its name. They have been masters of Switzerland and the Tyrol, rulers of Spain and the Netherlands, Emperors of the Holy Roman Empire, Kings of Bohemia. It was odd to find one of them a simple old maid in a Pennsylvania village some ten years ago. She had the name; she had the unmistakable "Hapsburg mouth" . . .

But that's another story.

* * * *

Philip I married Joanna, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella. When Philip died, his eldest son, Charles, succeeded to the Spanish throne, and Charles' brother Ferdinand to the Austrian. This Ferdinand's wife was a sister of the Hungarian King Louis, and, he leaving no issue, the male line of the Hapsburgs was finally acknowledged—by the Diet of Pressburg, in 1687—as hereditary Kings of Hungary. Nearly a hundred years thereafter, Charles VI left only a daughter, but she was a woman of resolution; she was Maria Theresa by marriage, Duchess of Lorraine, and she was chosen King—not Queen—of Hungary.

* * * *

When Republicanism raised its head in postwar Austria and Hungary, Charles Francis, Otto's father, declared: "I will not oppose my person to the free development of my people." But he never, to the day of his death, actually abdicated, either in his own name or his family's.

This is the gist of Otto's claim upon the throne of Austria and upon Hungary's Apostolic Crown of St. Stephen. "All Hungarians," that great Hungarian legitimist Count Apponyi once told us, "are legitimists."

* * * *

Once the Hapsburgs were perhaps the richest of reigning families; a few years of exile left them wretchedly poor. Yet the widowed Empress Zita, born a Princess of Bourbon-Parma, maintained through all vicissitudes every possible shred of the Dual Empire's imposing imperial etiquette. An Otto in rags was still regal.

"Adelaide, Robert, Felix, Charles, Rudolph-Syringus, Charlotte and Elizabeth, the other children," said that governess-lady-in-waiting, "were far less important. The person who darned Otto's stockings had to bow before putting them on the 10-year-old's legs; then had to walk from the room backward. Otto was even—his mother insisted upon it—his mother's Emperor.

* * * *

"Sire, kings do not eat with their fingers."

"This King does."

Nothing like that criticism would have been made quite so plainly to Otto. Otto would have made no such reply.

* * * *

He studied, when old enough, at Belgium's quietest university: Louvain. He majored in law and headed his class. He was popular, a good horseman, a good swimmer. And he spoke, besides German and Hungarian, French, Spanish and English. But, because he adored his pale, resolute, black-eyed mother, he was always anxious to get away to her for the long vacations at Lequeitio.

That is a miniature Spanish-Basque fishing village. No railroads connect it with the rest of the world. Not far from fashionable San Sebastian, it can be reached from there only by a bus line, which is the Spanish equivalent of Toonerville's Trolley. Three or four shabby villas face the sea: in the shabbiest lived the Hapsburgs.

* * * *

Let King Canute's tide be where it listed, every morning at 6 o'clock a narrow door opened in the basement wall of that shabbiest villa. Out of the opening came, in the order of their ages, the imperial children, wearing old-fashioned bathing suits, considerably darned. They ran to the beach, their mother following with towels. For exactly 20 minutes they bathed; then they returned to the villa.

Except when they went along the village's single street for a brisk walk into the country, the village saw almost nothing of them.

* * * *

And the old loyalist answered:

BARGERON.

PERHAPS there would be a clearer understanding of the present controversy between organized labor and the automobile industry if it were realized that it is no more of an effort of labor to unionize the industry than it is of the Administration, itself, to accomplish this unionization.

News accounts of the trouble, of necessity, portray it as more or less a fight between labor and industry, a natural corollary of a recovery from a depression, with the Government's interest confined to keeping the recovery processes functioning. It is more than that.

What is actually happening is that the Administration is now moving to effect the regimentation of another side of American industrial life. A more complete picture is had if it is looked upon as a fight between the Administration and the American Federation of Labor, on the one hand, and a large part of industry on the other.

• • • •

The Administration spent last spring and summer in regimenting industry. Until recently Washington observers had thought that this spring and summer were to be utilized in giving business and industry a big spurt. For one thing, the PWA projects which did not get underway last year, are to be loosened this spring. Plans are being made to pour out credit. With the psychology of growing crops, blooming flowers and the songs of the spring poets, one big, grand and glorious drive towards recovery was to be pressed.

It has become apparent now, however, that while the recovery drive will go on, the spring and summer are to be devoted also to more reform, or the completion of the reform already planned.

• • • •

There is not the slightest doubt that the Administration is just as determined to unionize the automobile and other heavy industries as is the American Federation of Labor. It is not a case at all of its being a three-cornered affair, labor and industry, with the Government sitting on the judicial side lines.

Instead, in this particular dispute, the Administration and the American Federation of Labor are working hand in hand. The federation's leaders are in close touch with the Administration, they take advice from them. When Mr. Roosevelt sent the telegram to the federation representative in Detroit, a fighting, genial Irishman, William Collins, asking him to postpone the strike until after the President had conferred with the automobile heads, he knew very well that the strike would be postponed. He is working with the labor leaders just that close.

What makes the situation all the more serious, of course, is that the motor manufacturers know all of this. They know what the fight is. It is not a labor squabble that they have on their hands.

It is, in short, the effort of the NRA to carry out the regimentation it originally planned, but which so far it has succeeded in carrying out on only one side. Why, Crack-Down Johnson himself told the motor manufacturers when they were here for his field day of criticism that they might as well accept unionization and get it over with. He made known then that he looked upon their company unions as just so much subterfuge. I understand that Mr. Roosevelt himself looks upon them this way.

As to the merits of it all, it is a fact that business in begging for the NRA regimentation promised the same regimentation to labor. That can not be forgotten now.

• • • •

And the political aspects are, of course, not being overlooked in the melee. In view of the course the Administration has pursued, observers generally agree that it must look largely to the labor vote to keep it in office in 1936. Completion of the unionization program becomes then a matter of major political import.

It does seem to be too bad, though, that the experimenting could not all have been finished last spring and summer and this year set aside exclusively for recovery.

In this connection, however, we must give heed to the warnings of the reformers. They have frequently said recovery is a matter of the "long pull." Reform is the immediate thing.

No End of Books

Theodore Hall

OUR text today is this—Hang your plot on a hickory limb and plunge right into the water.

For here is a plot. A young man reared in the Great Smoky Mountains wanted to see cities. A hill-billy girl wanted to escape from a local villain. They ran off together to New York, and she became a notable singer of mountain ballads and he became a great artist. Add a city girl for the triangle, top off with happy ending, and that's all.

Looking at it as plot, I'm sure I haven't seen anything so hackneyed in a coon's age. Why, it's outrageous!

ROY HELTON.

And yet, with that exact plot, Roy Helton has written a novel so validly poetic, of such delicate beauty and understanding, that my admiration knows few bounds. I have a touchstone for these novels of the "unspoiled youth in nature school"—does "Nitchey Tilley" (Harper, $2) move me as deeply and undeniably as does the story of Rima and Abel in W. H. Hudson's "Green Mansions?" It does.

• • • •

Old Dort lived alone in a cabin on Little Bear Creek. He'd come from the cities; he had no use for them or their ways. When a young woman stumbled in his door one day, said her name was Tilley, gave birth to a son, and died, he buried her down the hill. All he said over her grave was: "Beyond good and evil." When he came back to the cabin he had a name for the "little pink brat that lay sleeping with a whisky-flask full of watered milk"—Nietzsche, he called the child, and later that became Nitchey.

Old Dort reared the boy himself, taught him to read, taught him to see and listen to and smell everything in the mountains. Nitchey had to report every new bloom by the creek; later he had to draw the plants and flowers he found. But above all, Old Dort tried to impress on the boy the shamefulness of cities and their people. "This place right here is the best place there is in the world for you and me," he told Nitchey.

For years Nitchey believed him and was content. Then a wonder began to stir in the boy. By the time he was 20, a yellow-haired young giant, he had never seen a newspaper, a train, an automobile, or even a river. He knew what a great fringed orchis was, he had read the Arabian Nights, he could tell plants and people by their smell, but he didn't know what "hell-fire" meant, and he had seen only one young lady. Then Old Dort died, and Nitchey set out toward the cities to find out "what life was for."

• • • •

Well, you might think this a Tarzan story, but it's far different. Helton makes this youth absolutely credible. His meeting with the New York botanist in the mountains, his discovery that Margot, the botanist's daughter, was beautiful ("I thought that women all had whiskers," Nitchey said), his escape with the hill-girl Lomey from the enraged mountaineers—all this you will believe and live through every inch of the way.

The first part of the book, ended with the young couple coming to the main street of Galesburg and thinking it Broadway, is the best. Yet the latter half in New York, though overly sententious at times, has its moments. Nitchey and Lomey meet a street-peddler from the mountains, a medicine-man who'd learned his trade from Cherokee Joe's mother.

"A noble old woman," he told them one night. "She could spit 20 feet. Seen her do it many's the time. If she took after anyone with a battling stick, gentlemen, hush—you couldn't see Ducktown for dust."

That has the authentic grain. So do Lomey and Nitchey. Even their worldly success is believable, for all along we saw the qualities that caused it. At the end, Nitchey says: "Here and Now are still all that count for me." If a novel can open our own eyes that wide, it has done a rare and good thing.

Roy Helton, in Christopher Morley's words, is "a tall vagabond, all bone and gristle, who can travel all day on seven cents' worth of milk chocolate, knows the ins and outs of every queer trade, and is a passionate student of back alleys and mean streets."

He was born here in Washington of a Kentucky mountain family, went to the University of Pennsylvania, taught English, worked on newspapers, and lectured. His family background, and many a summer walking trip through the southern mountains, gave him his material. Some time back he put together a book of Kentucky ballads and folk songs—"Lonesome Water"—which was excellent. For his poetry he has received the Contemporary Verse prize and the Nation prize.

Of "Nitchey Tilley," his first novel, he can be rightly proud. It is a beautiful and distinctive novel in the poetic vein.

Associated Gas Huge Profits Bared in Quiz

(United Press.)

How the Associated Gas & Electric Securities Co., Inc., New York, threw $176,000,000 into trading on the New York Curb Exchange between 1926-29 inclusive to support its securities was revealed yesterday before the Federal Trade Commission.

The testimony was given by Trade Commission Examiner Charles Nodder, who investigated the company's activities. He described the company, formed in 1925, as merely the "securities department and ageney" of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. system.

He testified that 70 per cent of the trading during the four years was in class A stock, which the parent company "sold" to the security company at an arbitrary price of $35 per share, and the security company disposed of it at prevailing market prices.

Stock Off 71 Points.

In 1929, he said, the market price shot up to 72⅝ although now it sells at $1 per share.

Nodder told how the security company sold large blocks of the stock to units in the utility chain controlled by H. C. Hopson, president and treasurer of the security company and vice president and treasurer of Associated Gas & Electric Co.

These companies, principally the Associated Securities Corporation, International Public Utility Investing Corporation and the Public Utility Investing Corporation, reaped profits running into millions by reselling them to other companies in the associated chain, Nodder said.

Chain Bought Stock.

He testified that on December 31, 1929 there were 10,170,741 shares of that stock issued or distributed with a recorded value of $474,775,738, of which the company had reacquired 5,661,781. He explained that the balance of the stock not reacquired on the market was obtained from companies in the associated system, which had exchanged or converted their own securities for Class A.

In 1929, an advertising agency conducted by Daniel Starch, Hopson's brother-in-law, received $500,000 for advertising outlays. Of that, 15 per cent went to Starch, personally," Nodder said.

He estimated that more than $40,000,000 profits were made by the security company in its transactions.

The examiner added that the company first denied him access to its books and accounts but "it had been persuaded" to retract the decision.

New York, March 20 (AP).—Jesse W. Livermore, Wall street speculator who filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy on March 5, appeared today before Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn for a hearing.

"How did you happen to lose your money, Mr. Livermore?" asked Ehrhorn of the broker, who had listed liabilities of $2,259,212 against assets of $184,900. "I just kept going wrong," replied Livermore, "until it got so bad I couldn't go on."

Charles Eliot Hughes Lauds For Leadership

Administrative leaders with the "creative force" of Charles W. Eliot, former Harvard University president, would save America "from theb light of bureaucracy" Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes declared in an address last night.

He praised the educator for making people think by involving them in controversy.

"It was Eliot's distinction," he said, "that despite the preoccupations of the university and the enticements of cultural pursuits, he was eager for the strife which makes progress possible. He was wise enough to see that the hope of the Republic is not in submission but in controversy—in the triumphs won through high and free debate."

The Chief Justice stressed Eliot's view that citizens should prove themselves worthy of freedom by discipline in self-control.

"The freedom he cherished was the freedom of the scientific spirit, exploring, searching, testing, finding in the pursuit of truth the supreme pleasure.

"The free citizen, thus self-disciplined, was in Eliot's view to maintain himself to the utmost extent possible by self help. He thought that doctrine to be the foundation of public liberty. Said he, 'abject dependence on the Government is an accursed inheritence from the days of the divine rights of kings.'

"Freedom, responsibility, self-reliance—these were his watchwords. Education was to give the needed stimulants. 'Learning,' he observed, 'is always republican. It hasidols, but no masters.'"

Eliot was pictured by the speaker as a man of such intellectual capacity he could exercise National influence without official authority.

"His contribution to our public life was not merely the vitally important, though indirect, service of the scholar or of the manager and fructifier of educational processes.

"Eliot gave that service in preeminent degree, but he attained a far higher distinction. He stands out in vivid memory as the exemplar of the finest type of citizen of the republic—a keen, well-trained intellect, with all the resources of culture, seeking every opportunity to aid in forming intelligent views of public affairs, constantly and courageously striving for the public good. • • •

"Brave, unconquerable spirit, true and enlightened patriot, intelligent and faithful servant of free institutions—among the foremost of those good citizens who, as he put it, are 'filled with the noble ambition to deserve well of the republic'—high in the order of merit conferred by public appreciation and gratitude, stands Charles W. Kliot."

Rigid Control Of Guns Urged To Balk Gangs

Cummings Favors New Kidnaping Laws to Widen Power.

(Associated Press.)

Registration of machine guns and strengthening of the Lindbergh anti-kidnaping law were asked yesterday by Attorney General Cummings as the only way of dealing with highly organized criminals whose interstate operations are beyond the reach of local enforcement agencies.

Making it clear he did not propose having the Federal Government assume responsibility of law enforcement properly belonging to the States, the Attorney General told the House Judiciary Committee it must be realized that in this day of high-speed transportation, good roads and other facilities "an ordinary local police force, no matter how intelligent, earnest or honest, is perfectly helpless."

Cummings emphasized that such crimes as the Urschel kidnaping—in which the department had to track down the culprits over 683,000 square miles—was not an isolated case.

Make racketeering a Federal crime if as much as $5,000 is involved.

Amend the Lindbergh act to penalize interstate kidnaping of any kind, not just when ransom is involved.

Provide for registration and taxation of machine guns made and sold, with fingerprinting of purchasers, to assure a complete check.

The Once Over . . . By H. I. Phillips

Plant Owner—How's business?

General Manager—Very punk, sir. In fact, I might say there's not a wheel turning.

Owner—Well, we'll have to put on some more help.

Manager—There's not enough work to keep busy the men we have.

Owner—No matter. The idea isn't to keep men busy necessarily. I just want the feeling they're around. It's so companionable.

Manager—But if we . . .

• • • •

Owner—Don't argue. I like plenty of men around the plant, particularly when there's nothing for them to do.

Manager—But it's uneconomic.

Owner—Forget it. We're humanitarians now, you know.

Manager—I had an uncle once who was a humanitarian. He could cure a sick horse of anything. Once when a horse broke its leg he . . .

Owner—You mean veterinarian, not humanitarian.

• • • •

Owner—What do we pay our mill hands now?

Manager—Thirty-five dollars a week.

Owner—Well, let's see. Have we any orders coming in?

Manager—None, sir.

Owner—Did we ship any goods last month?

Manager—No, sir.

Manager—Yes, sir.

Owner—How near bankruptcy are we?

Manager—I should say about 50 yards, sir, straight down the fairway.

Owner—Well, double the wages all along the line and put the new help on at $70 a week, too.

Manager—It's suicide, sir, suicide!

Owner (gayly)—Nonsense. You haven't been keeping abreast of things. It's pump priming. It's the new economic planning. It's business revival. Say, who do you think you are, anyhow?

Owner—You're nothing of the kind. You're Oscar J. Shucks, humanitarian. And do you know who I am?

Manager—Who are you?

Owner—I am Little Goody Two Shoes.

REPORT FROM THE SOUTHLAND No. 356.

Here I sit in fair Belleair,
Springtime in the balmy air;
The birds are singing in the trees—
And Billy Burke gets seven 3's!

The golf course runs beside the sea
Which isn't any break for me;
A slice like mine will tend to vex—
It keeps me in the Gulf of Mex.

Each afternoon from 1 to 4
We have a famous visitor;
Babe Ruth, who comes by racing car,

Brown dress suits have been decreed by the Nazis. They are great for not showing the beer stains after a wedding.

As we see it Col. Lindbergh is willing to fly around the world alone or with his wife at the drop of a hat, but he won't take off with a Democrat under any circumstance.

Speaking of that course in marriage at Connecticut College, it is more than possible that the girl who leads her class in this study will wind up by marrying a bigamist with seven children and an aversion to work.

CAN YOU REMEMBER——

Away back when the question, "Where do you think you are? In Russia?" was considered quite a poser?

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

"Green Pastures."

The phenomenal success of the play "Green Pastures" is fully deserved. I saw it the first week it appeared in New York and later I had the pleasure of seeing it again and conversing with the admirable actor who plays the part of God. He told me that he used to be a waiter in a Detroit Hotel, but that he had always been fond of reciting poetry and dramatic pieces for his friends and in amateur theatricals. He knew an immense amount of Shakespeare by heart. No one can talk with this artist without a great respect both for his actual talents and for his high aims.

When I first heard that God and the angels and the Bible characters were actually to appear on the stage, I feared that the show might be sacrilegious. It is quite the contrary. While it contains delightful humor, it is a noble and beautiful and sincerely religious drama. As I watched and listened I was carried back in imagination to the Mystery Plays of the Middle Ages, which I taught to many generations of college students.

The childlike and literal mind of the people in those days did not conceive of God as a spiritual essence; they thought of him as a kind of superman. On the stage he wore garments of white enameled leather and his head was covered with a golden wig. Hell was always literally represented, and the Devil was the character in the highest favor with the audience. I shall not forget what one of my undergraduates wrote on an examination paper that I had set. I had described how hell was represented on the stage with a huge mouth of flame and smoke, in front of which danced characters called the Damned Souls. They were dressed in black tights, with yellow stripes to represent the flames. On the examination paper I set the question, Describe the costumes of the actors. One man, after correctly describing that of God, Pilate, &c., wrote, "The Damned Souls wore Princeton colors." I marked him perfect.

Well, "Green Pastures" is a modern Mystery Play. God, with his frock coat and his cigar, Gabriel, Moses, Noah have brought the Bible back on the stage. The scene in God's Office, where the cleaners have their wings in dustclothes, is delightful. The death of Moses is tremendously impressive.

This play has captured the hearts of the American people. When the man who played Noah died the other day, many thousands felt as if they had lost a personal friend, as we did at the death of Gabriel in a previous year. This is one of the best plays of the twentieth century.

Can't Save Lamb by Hiding Truth About Wolves

By Robert Quillen

A recent magazine article, written by a distressed father, declares that the responsibility of guiding a 12-year-old son makes the father a hypocrite and a liar.

The writer of the article, having lost the orthodox faith of his childhood, is willing to take his chances here and hereafter as an unbeliever; but he doesn't feel secure enough to wish his boy to be like him, so he teaches the youngster to believe things that he doesn't believe himself.

As a result he is often cornered. The boy reminds him that Jesus taught people to love one another and then asks him to explain why ministers take part in war. The father answers that he doesn't know.

But surely he does know. And what harm could he do by telling the truth? The boy will learn in time that few professing Christians practice what they preach. But he can be taught the worth of honesty without being told that all men are honest.

The boy of 12 has a more logical and more honest mind than he ever will have in later life. And the arithmetic problems he solves are proof of his ability to reason.

It isn't necessary to lie to him. He can understand anything that his parents have the wit to explain.

The parent's job is difficult only as he makes it so. If he tries to make the boy believe things that are untrue and unreasonable, he must evade many questions or find refuge in the ancient alibi, "You aren't old enough to understand."

But if his own mind is honest, he can answer every question honestly and truthfully, or as honestly and truthfully say: "I do not know."

I have learned by experience that it is possible to "bring up" a child from infancy to voting age without lying or dodging a question.

It isn't a great achievement. Telling the truth is easier than finding evidence to support untruth.

And having assumed the duty of arming a youngster for the battle of life, it is poor sportsmanship to give him equipment that he can't trust.

G. S. Messersmith Gets Vienna Post

Consul General Succeeds Earle as Minister.

George S. Messersmith, Consul General in Berlin and recently named Minister to Uruguay, has been selected to succeed George H. Earle 3d as Minister to Austria, it was learned reliably yesterday.

Messersmith is in Berlin, winding up his work preparatory to going to Montevideo. The change in orders to Vienna will reach him soon enough to save him the trip to South America and back.

Messersmith is highly regarded in the department and has gained added credit in the past year by the vigorous efforts he made to protect Americans from Nazi excesses.

When Secretary Hull sailed to Montevideo last November he transferred Wright, Minister to Uruguay, to Prague and promoted Messersmith to succeed him.

Delaware Marshal Nominated.

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Austin D. Smith, of Clayton, Del., to be United States Marshal for the district of Delaware. He also sent to the Senate the name of Paul A. Roach, of New Mexico, to be register of the land office at Las Cruces, N. Mex.

One Strike Ended As Another Starts

350 Shirt Plant Workers Walk Out.

Morgantown, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Industrial strife in West Virginia today saw one set of workers returned to work and another group out on strike.

The plant of the Charles Greenburg Shirt Co. here, employing 350, was closed. Spokesmen for the strikers said they were contending for union recognition and named a committee to confer with B. H. Schwebel, manager.

Unskilled employes of the New Martinsville Glass Manufacturing Co., at New Martinsville, were back at work after being out on a strike since last week. It was said that grievances would be arbitrated between the company and a local union affiliated with the Flint Glass Workers of America. The plant employs 200.

Storm Lashes Virginia Capes

Norfolk, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—A Northeaster brought high tides and gales all along the coast today from Hatteras to Cape Henry, where the wind attained a velocity of 52 miles an hour. Fifteen miles away, where the Chesapeake Lightship is anchored, 60 miles an hour was recorded.

The lightship wirelessed the depot at Portsmouth stating she was in no danger. The storm reached its peak about 8 a. m., and by 3 p. m. the wind had shifted to the northwest. More than an inch of rain fell in less than 10 hours, followed by sleet.

Few ships were reported passing Cape Henry. A number were scheduled to sail from Norfolk and Newport News but remained in port to await fair weather.

Cape Hatteras reported high tides and a 58 mile-an-hour gale. The storm center passed that point early this morning and was off Cape Henry about noon.

No damage was reported to shipping so far as Coast Guard headquarters had been advised. The Weather Bureau warned of the storm many hours before it struck. Five coal-laden colliers scheduled to sail for Boston and New York remained in Lynnhaven Bay.

The appearance of Harry Greestein, Federal relief administrator for Maryland, scheduled yesterday before the Prince Georges County Commissioners, was postponed until 10 a. m. today.

The commissioners adjourned early to attend the funeral of Judge J. Chew Sheriff of the county police court.

Before adjourning, however, the commissioners received scores of protests against the 8-cent unemployment tax which Greestein intends to urge. Many were made by delegations from various parts of the county. All declared the present taxes are unbearable, without addition of 8 cents on each $100 on real estate.

Farmers Flay Annapolis Link Of Roads Plan

Davidsonville-Hall Station Stretch Protested to Commissioners.

Annapolis, Md., March 20 (Spl.).—Farmers of the Davidsonville section, First District, today vigorously protested the State Roads Commission's plans to construct 6½ miles of road that would be a link of a new highway from Annapolis to Washington.

The strip would run from Davidsonville to Hall Station, the highway having been completed on the Washington and Annapolis ends.

The midway link, favored by certain residents, would run by way of Hardesty and cross Patuxent River at Queen Anne Bridge. The road commission contends it would follow a straight line between Davidsonville and Hall Station, about a mile north of the established county route.

Eugene P. Childs, chief spokesman for the protesting group, told the Anne Arundel County commissioners the route was selected by the State without consulting county officials. He said the county would have to maintain the old highway and bridge, as well as construct feeder roads to the new highway.

The matter will be threshed out at a meeting of the county commissioners, the taxpayers' committee and representatives of the roads commission.

Charleston, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—A formal order was issued today by the State Board of Control banning beer, including the legalized 3.2 per cent kind, and all intoxicating beverages, including liquors and wines, from all Etate colleges and other State institutions.

The purpose of the order, according to board members, was to forestall a reported student movement to arrange for the sale of beer on college campuses.

A. Spates Brady, board president, stated the board makes no distinction as to alcoholic content of beer, despite State laws defining it, and that it would "apply to 1.1 if necessary."

Luray Booticians Plan to Sell 'Good' Quart at 75 Cents

Luray, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Luray bootleggers are reported to have perfected a strong set-up to compete with legal liquor when it comes on the market in a few days, with a "good brand" of liquor to sell at 75 cents a quart.

This will be 25 cents a quart less than any legal liquor on the market in Virginia, it is believed. The bootleggers' set-up contemplates "aging" their liquor in charred kegs. Officials believe the bootlegger will be a formidable competitor for the dispensary.

With no special incentive for police to track down the bootlegger, it appears his path will be an open one for some time to come.

Envoy Soon Will Depart For Brussels

Capital Society Learns of Diplomatic Shift With Regret.

Although Washington has long been the Diplomatic cross-roads of the world where arrivals, meetings and departures follow in all too rapid succession, society has yet to acquire the art of saying, "Bon Voyage," without regret.

So it is that society learns with regret of the most recent change in the Diplomatic Corps, the impending departure of the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, for the Ambassador's new post in Brussels.

The Ambassador and Mme. de Lima e Silva have been in Washington since April 24, 1931. Their many close friends will sincerely miss them and eagerly await another meeting.

The Ambassador and Mme. de Lima e Silva came to Washington from Mexico where they were stationed for several years. Mexico is Mme. de Lima's native land, but until her husband's diplomatic service there, she had spent little time in that country as her father was a career man in the Mexican diplomatic service and made his home in many lands. Mme. de Lima also, since her marriage, has changed her place of residence often.

Mme. de Lima e Silva, not only will leave friends behind when she bids farewell to the Capital but family as well, as her sister is Mme. Nano, wife of the Counselor of Roumanian Legation, and through her brother-in-law, Mr. Nano, she is related to Mme. de Cardenas, wife of the Ambassador of Spain.

Senor Do Amaral Retires.

It is indeed unusual to have at the same post envoys of three important countries who are linked by such close ties.

The Ambassador succeeded Senor Gurgel do Amaral, who spent several years in Washington representing his country and went from here to Tokio, where he took over the duties of Ambassador of Brazil to Japan.

Senor do Amaral retired from the diplomatic service a month ago, but is sojourning in Japan before returning to his home in Brazil.

Hand-Weaving Art Gets New Lease on Life

By Ruth Anne Davis.

After the fashion of the big oaks that grow proverbially from little acorns, a little mountain school down in North Carolina over the space of 25 years has grown into the largest hand-weaving industry in the world.

Twenty-five years ago one of America's wealthy and philanthropic women interested herself in mountain craftsmanship. She started a school in which boys and girls were to be taught weaving, hand carving, needlecraft and other usefult arts.

For generations these mountaineers had been weavers, but their methods were crude. They combed and spun the wool by hand, used the simplest form of hand looms, threw the shuttle with one hand, caught it with the other. The dyes they used were yellow hickory bark, black walnut root, and the like. Naturally, their work was slow.

The philanthropist sought and found means for improving their methods so they could produce more than two or three yards daily. After the material was woven, it was sent to the school, where it would be scoured and finished, put in the sun to dry and shrink.

Passing tourists often saw, approved, and bought. Almost inevitably they sent back for more. As time went on, the demand outgrew the supply.

Large shop buildings were put up and the weavers and woolen workers came to pursue their trade. There were bigger looms, better dyes and all kinds of modern facilities. Without any advertising or efforts to sell the materials on a commercial basis, the orders continued to pour in.

Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, a life-long experimenter along lines of health, had experimented with growing plants in boxes under woolen coverings. In every instance the seedlings had proven in the end to be starved and sickly. Hearing of this new industry, he tried again, using these hand-woven fabrics. Six boxes of seeds were arranged in a row, covered with the woolens and put out in the sunlight. When the cloth was removed it was found that the seeds had grown just as though they had been directly exposed to the sun's rays. These results established the fact that light rays pass through the hand-woven woolen homespuns and do not shut out the valuable sunlight from light-starved bodies.

This industry is not based on a new discovery. It is simply a return to something that has been done for thousands of years, and that was carried on by our ancestors until a few generations ago.

These woolens may be ordered from a Washington woman, the only representative of the "factory" in Washington. She can show you samples, light weaves for summer, medium for winter, and heavy coat weaves. They come in amazingly clear pure colors, sky blues, geranium reds, misty grays, dead blacks, snowy whites and innumerable others. The prices now are lower than they ever have been, probably than they ever will be. Call and we'll tell you how to reach this representative.

Department Store Zoo.

An elephant green, and a donkey gray,
Side by side on the counter lay.
Neither moved nor made a sound;
Both were soft and stuffed with down.

Three guesses what. They're pillows, amazing novelties which send children into gales of laughter, and bring smiles to adult lips.

As the proprietor of the shop said, it doesn't matter if they're never sold, they're the best drawing card in years.

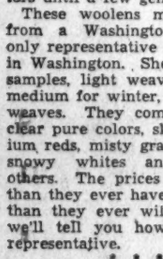
Independent Light.

The "middle of the night lamps" in a local novelty shop might best be described as independent. With no outside aid, without even a wire or plug, or the push of a button, on they go, the minute they're picked up.



In the small hours when the telephone startles one from a sound sleep, or the baby wakes up in a restless mood, it's a godsend to have such a lamp within easy reach. On it goes, off it goes, at the mere lift of a hand. It might be magic, but it's a lamp instead, a lamp for 98 cents!

Complexion Advice.

Dear Miss Davis: I have small pimples across my forehead. Can you advise me what to do about them? S. G.

It is highly probable that the pimples come from disordered blood conditions due to improper diet and from clogged pores.

You should eat a lot of fruits and vegetables, exercise as often as possible in the open air, and keep your skin immaculately clean.

Never go to bed without thoroughly cleansing your skin. If you wash your face with soap and water try using a complexion brush, rubbing this over the pimply area.

Two or three times a week use a special washing preparation, cleansing grains, to penetrate the pores.

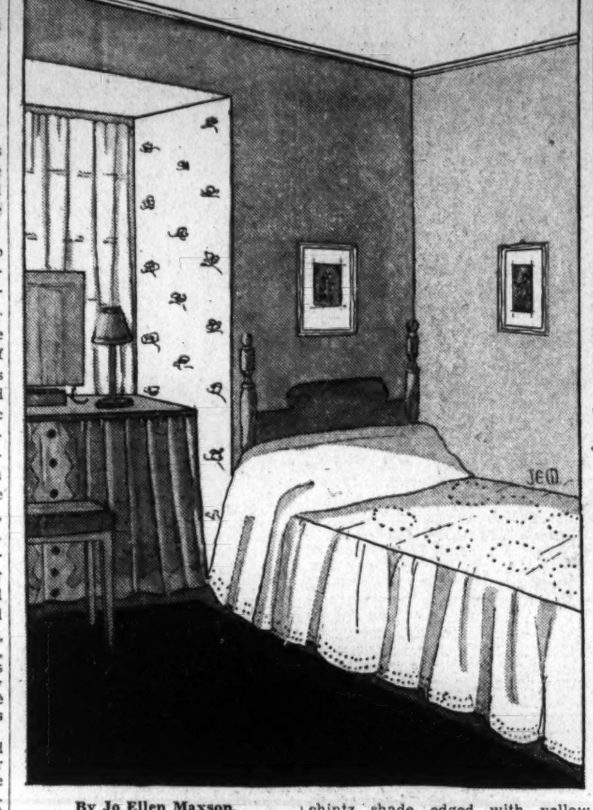
Blue in Gay New Shades Makes Cheery Bedrooms



By Jo Ellen Maxson.

Blue in every conceivable shade and variation is taking a definite place in spring color schemes. For a long time blue has been thought of as a cold, light-absorbing color, but the new blues are the shades of tropical waters and flowers and are used in combination with another gay, bright color to bring in a note of contrast.

A delightful bedroom in one home is decorated in varying shades of blue, all in harmony, with white and vivid yellow as accents. The walls are painted a soft turquoise. A nook in which a dormer window is set is papered in a pattern of blue and yellow flowers on a white background. The woodwork is painted flat white. The floor is covered with a carpet of deep larkspur blue.

The windows are curtained in yellow cotton voile which gives an effect of sunlight filtering through. The curtains are shirred full; no draperies are used as the dormer windows are small and the maximum amount of light is needed in the room.

A dressing-table with an overskirt of quilted glazed chintz in a pattern of yellow dots and scallops on a clear blue background is placed in front of one of the window nooks. It is bordered with a pointed facing of yellow with large blue buttons up the center.

The second dormer window is used as a book nook. A comfortable arm chair is upholstered in delft blue chintz with a tiny pin stripe of light blue. It is welted in white. Nearby are low, built-in book shelves, painted white, and a floor lamp with a chromium base with insets of brass and a white parchment shade.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Vitamin B-Complex Makes D. G.s Go Up

Chicago, March 20 (AP).—If Johnny or Mary gets low grades in school, some "Vitamin B-Complex" may remedy the situation.

These are deductions from tests by Dr. Siegfried Maurer, nutritionist, and Dr. Eva Ruth Balken.

Undernourished children were selected for the test. With the school lunch, which was the chief meal of the pupils, they were given Vitamin B-Complex tablets.

The children were tested mentally before receiving the vitamin and again every 30 days. Every child showed a marked improvement in intelligence.

Dressmaking Tricks on Coats Make for a Cape-Like Look

Wide and Rippled Revers Help to Fool Your Public.

By AMOS PARRISH.

New York, March 21.—Whatever you may think about evolution, there can be no doubt that it's always at work in fashion. And one striking example of it is found in what's happening to those capes on coats which were so smart and dashing last Easter and the Easter before.

Some of them are still as they were . . . a real cape, attached to the coat and extending down about to the elbows. And it's a fashion which the very tall woman approves of, since it helps cut her height.

But the newer idea is to have a sort of cape-like look without actually being a cape. And there are several ways to do it.

Wide Rippled Revers.

One way is sketched. What looks to be a cape over the shoulders is really wide, rippled revers . . . so wide that they extend well out at the shoulder line.

Sometimes these revers are of fur or fur-trimmed. And that makes the coat very dressy and formal.

Another cape-effect is even shorter than this and really is a cape. Looks like one in back, too, though in the front it is draped up and fastened to look more like a cowl neckline.

What Goes With What?

Just what kind of coat is, of course, the first decision you must make about your spring wardrobe. Then, what goes with it?

Business Men Hold Exhibition Of Oil Paintings

Forget Desks After Five and Turn to Higher Realms of Art.

Chicago, March 20 (U.P.).—Those unintelligent curlicues scribbled on the boss' memo pad took on a real artistic significance today when the purple velvet curtains were pulled aside on the first business men's art showing here.

The rolly-polly piggies with curling tails and feet like toothpicks stuck in sausages became—with a studied regard for a pig's aesthetic features—part of a rural scene against a sun-sprayed country background.

The grotesque face on the memo pad, done in the technique ordinarily applied to jack o' lantern carving, was transformed into the head of a Mexican cowboy in splashing color.

The showing of oil canvasses by 32 business men who, from 9 until 5 sit at desks and bark stern decisions about nuts and bolts, debentures and railroad ties, opened in the galleries of the Chicago Lighting Indist minister and president of the stiute on Wacker drive.

The Rev. James O'May, a Metho-Business Men's Art Club, walked proudly around the gallery, bending back and surveying the paintings with the squinted, practiced eye of a Michaelangelo.

These Two Recipes for Refrigerator Cake Are Simple and Labor Saving; Will Leave Housewives Time for Spring Shopping.

By Susan Mills.

There's something in the air these days that makes one want to rush out and sing spring songs, and every woman to squander her husband's salary on clothes.

The discussion of clothes should be left to the fashion expert, but hereby hangs an observation. One needs leisure to shop, and in order to have the leisure, the problem of the next meal must be satisfactorily taken care of early in the day.

Thanks to modern science, that brought woman the boon of the electric refrigerator, the food problem is of less importance than it used to be. There are many delightful things one can do with a refrigerator, but this particular discussion will be limited to desserts.

Here are two recipes for icebox cakes that will take little time to prepare and leave you ample leisure to shop.

French Refrigerator Cake.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 1-3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
Vanilla wafers.

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir over boiling water 5 minutes, until mixture thickens. Add water. Line oblong loaf pan with waxed paper and cover bottom of pan with thin layer of chocolate. Then add layer of vanilla wafers. Repeat in layers until chocolate mixture is all used. Top with layer of wafers. Let remain in refrigerator 24 hours. To serve, turn out on small platter and carefully remove waxed paper. Cut in slices and garnish with whipped cream if desired.

Graham-Mallow Cake.

¼ cup sweetened condensed milk
1 cup pineapple juice
½ pound graham crackers
1 cup crushed pineapple

Cut marshmallows in quarters. Add sweetened condensed milk and pineapple juice. Blend. Add graham cracker crumbs and crushed drained pineapple. Press firmly into loaf pan lined with wax paper. Place in refrigerator and let stay 5 hours or longer before serving. Serve in slices with whipped cream if desired, and a maraschino cherry. This will keep moist for several days in the refrigerator. Serves eight.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Certain rather generally followed practices in the care of those with nephritis, so far from being beneficial, are rather apt to do more harm than good. One of these practices is giving the milk cure to a person with acute Bright's disease. Occasionally the Karrell cure, consisting of 6 ounces of milk every four hours during the waking period, is made use of. More frequently the method followed consists in giving from a quart to two quarts of milk in the 24 hours. The method is not a good one. In fact, it is definitely a bad one. There is far too much water in three or four pints of milk and also too much salt. Excess of these two, when consumed by a person with acute Bright's, tends to increase dropsy.

The custom of drinking large quantities of water in this condition because it is supposed to flush the kidneys is also a bad one. It contributes to dropsy.

Another related practice is the one of giving medicines to produce sweating. It is not easy to induce sweating in acute Bright's by taking medicines. If sweating is produced, not much waste material is thrown off that way. The amount of nitrogen and nitrogenous waste that can be removed that way is small. Even if one-half gallon of water and a dram of salt is removed, not much is gained—not enough to warrant the effort. The skin can be kept warm by warm sponging or by hot water bottles to feet, or by treatment with an electric light or infrared lamp. This is desirable, but the good is not from any sweating that follows.

Another frequently indulged fallacy is allowing white meats and fish and forbidding red meat. Red meat, white meat, and fish are about on a par. There is no sense in allowing one and forbidding another. Red is a little harder to digest and contains a few more extractives, but the difference is trivial. White meat, being a little drier, contains less moisture and therefore contains a little more protein. Fish is softer and more watery and may be therefore poorer in nutriment. But in each case the difference is offset by changing the amount eaten just a trifle—say one mouthful.

The reason for bleeding is generally misstated. Bleeding may do good, but if so it is not because it removes poisons from the blood. The amount of poison that can be removed that way is trifling.

A far more harmful error than either of these relates to diet in some of the more chronic forms of the group called Bright's disease. It relates to the use of the milk diet, or to the use of large quantities of milk and of little or no meat in the treatment. The reference here is to the use of such diets for a long time. Patients with some of this group of troubles are very apt to become anemic. They nearly always need iron. Milk is poor in iron. They need meat for iron and for other reasons.

The Dragon Murder Case

By S. S. Van Dine.

The Story Thus Far.

Phil Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergt. Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool on the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member of the house party had sufficient motive for murdering Montague with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged. Stamm himself was helplessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy and is under a doctor's care. As Vance questions him a woman's sudden and terrifying scream rings out from the floor above.

Chapter V

The Water Monster.

(Sunday, August 12, 2 a. m.)

There was a second of tense, startled silence. Then Heath swung round and rushed toward the door, his hand slipping into his outer coat pocket where he carried his gun. As he reached he threshold, Leland stepped quickly up to him and placed a restraining hand on his shoulder.

"Do not bother," he said, quietly. "It is all right."

"The hell it is!" Heath shot back, throwing off the other's hand and stepping into the hallway.

Doors had begun to open along the hallway, and there were several smothered exclamations.

"Get back in your rooms!" bawled Heath. "And stay in 'em." He planted himself aggressively outside the door, glowered down the corridor.

Evidently some of the guests, frightened by the scream, had come out to see what the trouble was. But confronted with the menacing attitude of the sergeant and cowed by his angry command, they returned to their quarters, and we could hear the doors close again. The sergeant, confused and indecisive, turned threateningly to Leland, who was standing near the door with a calm but troubled look on his face.

"Where'd that scream come from?" he demanded. "And what does it mean?"

"For the love of God," he complained, irritably, "will you gentlemen get out of here! You've done enough damage already. * * * Get out, I tell you! Get out!" Then he turned to Dr. Holliday. "Please go up to mother, doctor, and give her something. She's having another attack—what with all this upheaval round the house."

Dr. Holliday left the room, and we could hear him mounting the stairs.

Vance has been unimpressed by the whole episode. He stood smoking casually, his eyes resting dreamily on the man in bed.

Apologizes to Mrs. Stamm.

"Deuced sorry to have upset your household, Mr. Stamm," he murmured. "Every one's nerves are raw, don't y' know. Hope you'll be better in the morning. * * * We'll toddle downstairs—eh, what, Markham?"

Leland looked at him gratefully and nodded.

"I am sure that would be best," he said, leading the way.

We went out of the room and descended the stairs. Heath, however, remained in the hall for a moment glaring up toward the third floor.

"Come, sergeant," Vance called to him. "You're overwrought."

Again in the drawing room, Vance settled into a chair and, looking at Leland inquiringly, waited for an explanation.

"That was Stamm's mother, Matilda Stamm," he said when he had got his pipe going. "She occupies the third floor of the house. She is a little unbalanced. * * *" He made a slight but significant gesture toward his forehead. "Not dangerous you understand, but erratic—given occasionally to hallucinations. She has queer attacks now and then, and talks incoherently."

"Sounds like mild paranoia," Vance murmured. "Some hidden fear, perhaps."

"That is it, I imagine," Leland returned. "A psychiatrist they had for her years ago suggested a private sanitarium, but Stamm would not hear of it. Instead he turned the third floor over to her, and there is some one with her all the time. She is in excellent physical health and is perfectly rational most of the time. But she is not permitted to go out. However, she is well taken care of, and the third floor has a large balcony and a conservatory for her diversion. She spends most of her time cultivating rare plants."

Inquires About Attacks.

"How often do her attacks come?"

"Two or three times a year, I understand, though she is always full of queer ideas about people and things. Nothing to worry about, though."

"And the nature of these attacks?"

"They vary. Sometimes she talks and argues with imaginary people. At other times she becomes hysterical and babbles of events that occurred when she was a girl. Then, again, she will suddenly take violent dislikes to people, for no apparent reason and proceed to berate and threaten them."

Vance nodded.

"Typical," he mused. Then, after several deep inhalations on his Regie, he asked in an offhand manner, "On which side of the house are Mrs. Stamm's balcony and conservat'ry?"

Leland's eyes moved quickly toward Vance and he lifted his head.

"On the northeast corner," he answered with a slightly rising inflection, as if his answer were purposely incomplete.

Leland nodded. Then, after a brief hesitation, he sad: "The pool has a curious hold on her fancy. It is the source of many of her hallucinations. She sits for hours gazing at it abstractedly, and the German woman who looks after her—a capable companion-nurse named Schwartz—tells me that she never goes to bed without first standing in rapt attention for several minutes at the window facing the pool."

"Very interestin'. By the by, Mr. Leland, do you know when the pool was constructed?"

Leland frowned, thoughfully.

"I can not say exactly. I know it was built by Stamm's grandfather—that is to say, he built the dam to broaden the water of the stream. But I doubt if he had anything in mind except a scenic improvement. It was Stamm's father—Joshua Stamm—who put in the retaining wall on this side of the pool, to keep the water from straying too far up the hill toward the house. And it was Stamm himself who installed the filter and the gates, when he first began to use the pool for swimming. The water was not particularly free from rubbish, and he wanted some way of filtering the stream that fed it, and also of closing off the inflow, so that the pool could be cleaned out occasionally."

"How did the pool get its name?" asked Vance, casually.

Leland gave a slight shrug.

"Heaven only knows. From some old Indian tradition, probably. The Indians hereabouts originally called it by various terms—Amangaming, Amanagemokdom, Wikit and sometimes Amangemokdomipek—but as a rule the shorter word, Amangaming, was used, which means, in the Lenape dialect of the Algonkians, the 'place of water monster.' When I was a child my mother always referred to the pool by that name, although at that time it was pretty generally known as the Dragon Pool, which is a fairly accurate transliteration of its original name. Many tales and superstitions grew up around it. The water dragon—Amangemokdomt or, sometimes Amangegach—was used as a bogy with which to frighten recalcitrant children."

"This is hardly the hour," he complained, "for a discussion of mythology."

"Tut, tut, old dear," Vance chided him pleasantly. "I say, these ethnological data are most fascinatin' For the first time tonight we seem to be getting a little forrader. I'm beginning to understand why nearly every one in the house is filled with doubts and misgivings."

He smiled ingratiatingly and turned his attention again to Leland.

"By the by," he went on, "is Mrs. Stamm given to such distressin' screams during her cloudy moments?"

They Visit Mrs. Stamm.

Again Leland hesitated, but finally answered: "Occasionally—yes."

"And do these screams usually have some bearing on her hallucinations regarding the pool?"

Leland inclined his head.

"Yes—always." Then he added: "But she is never coherent as to the exact cause of her perturbation. I have been present when Stamm has tried to get an explanation from her, but she has never been lucid on the subject. It is as if she feared some thing in the future which her momentarily excited mind could not visualize. An inflamed and confused projection of the imagination, I should say—without any definite mental embodiment. * * *"

At this moment the curtains parted and Dr. Holliday's troubled face looked into the room.

"I am glad you gentlemen are still here," he said. "Mrs. Stamm is in an unusual frame of mind, and insists on seeing you. She is having one of her periodical attacks—nothing serious, I assure you. But she seems very much excited and she refused to let me give her something to quiet her. * * * I really don't feel that I should mention these facts to you, but in the circumstances——"

"I have explained Mrs. Stamm's condition to these gentlemen," Leland put it quietly.

The doctor appeared relieved.

"That being the case," he went on, "I can tell you quiet frankly that I am a little worried. And, as I say, she insists that she see the police—as she calls you—at once." He paused as if uncertain. "Perhaps it might be best—if you do not mind. Since she has this idea, a talk with you might bring about the desired reaction. * * * But I warn you that she is a bit hallucinated, and I trust that you will treat her accordingly. * * *"

Speaks Assuringly.

Vance had risen.

"We quiet understand, doctor," he said assuringly, adding significantly: "It might be better for all of us if we talked with her."

We retraced our way up the dimly lighted stairs and at the second-story hallway turned upward to Mrs. Stamm's quarters.

On the third floor the doctor led the way down a wide passage, toward the rear of the house, to an open door through which a rectangular shaft of yellow light poured into the gloom of the hall. The room into which we were ushered was large and crowded with early Victorian furniture.

A dark green shabby carpet covered the floor, and on the walls was faded green paper. The overstuffed satin-covered chairs had once been white and chartreuse green, but were now gray and dingy. An enormous canopied bed stood at the right of the door, draped in pink damask; and similar damask, with little of its color left, formed the long overdrapes at the window. The Nottingham-lace curtains beneath were wrinkled and soiled. Opposite the bed was a fireplace, on the hearth of which lay a collection of polished conch shells, and beside it stood a high pool what-not overladen with all manner of hideous trifles of the period. Several large faded oil paintings were suspended about the walls on wide satin ribbons which were tied in bows at the molding.

As we entered, a tall, capable-looking gray-haired woman, in a Hoover apron, stepped aside to make way for us.

Aid for Married Couples Only In New Birth Control Proposal

(Associated Press.)

Physicians would be allowed to mail birth control information only to married persons, under a proposal advanced today for revision of the Hastings birth control bill.

A. Ralph Burton, counsel for opponents of the original measure, went into conference with Mrs. Margaret Sanger and other advocates at the conclusion of a Senate committee hearing.

Part of the opposition might be dropped, Burton indicated, if the bill were amended to prevent commercial exploitation and to permit distribution of information only by physicians to married persons.

After the bill, which would open the mails to information and articles now barred, had been attacked by the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan of the Catholic University of America, Senators Hastings and Logan suggested it might be altered to meet many objections.

Father Ryan told the committee birth control was not a remedy for unemployment, but eventually would bring about disastrous economic conditions, with a danger of extinction of the population.

Miss Agnes G. Regan, of New York, secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, said that "once the barriers are down, show windows of drug stores will reek with various devices and advertisements will broadcast the most sacred of all relationships upon which the safety of society rests."

Canon William S. Chase of the International Reform Federation asserted the bill was backed by "very great commercial interests, knowing that a vast amount of money is to be realized from gratifying the baser desires of young people."

Representatives Eulogize Their States' Spring Seasons.

The cold, cold shoulder that spring has turned toward Washington makes it hard to believe the calendar these days. The signs of the season are here, though . . . long-sprayed, yellow-budded forsythia, the never-disappointing pussy willows and the little rolls of sassafras bark sold in the market places by the Negro women who dig it in the Virginia woods.

If Washingtonians feel snubbed by spring listen to what Representative Edward C. Moran, of Maine, says about spring in his State:

"Whew! It's far from spring yet in Maine. There's snow all over the State and it's really cold—a cold you Washingtonians know nothing about. It'll be nice up home in April, though. Then the wild narcissus blossoms. But we won't have many flowers until late May."

• • • •

Spring has danced in and nearly danced out of her home State, says Representative Florence P. Kahn, of California.

"All the fruit trees have bloomed and the blossoms have fallen," Mrs. Kahn said.

"The wisteria is out, too, by now. March is lovely in California."

Those who think of cacti flowers as the only desert blooms should hear Senator Patrick A. McCarran, of Nevada, tell of spring in his much-beloved country. Let him describe spring "back home:"

"Spring will come with a gush to the desert—sharply—probably about the first of May. Then it will be realy warm and we'll have flowers everywhere . . . acres of them . . . fields of them. Our forests of wild lupines that grow knee-high are prettier than the tame lupines that gardeners know.

"Then, over all the wild flowers the sky takes on delicate colors — unbelievably wonderful colors, unless you see them. But don't let me start talking about spring on the desert or I'll never find out when I'll get a hearing on my milk inquiry resolution.

A Senator from a far Southwestern State wanted to make an address before a luncheon club back home the other day. He entered into negotiations with communications experts on the problem. They tied him in with a radio hook-up out West.

But the Senator belongs to the oratorical type of statesmanship school and couldn't divorce speaking from gesture and posture.

Consequently, he was in front of the transmitter part of the time and the other part of the time he backed up far enough away to give him elbow room to point with pride.

The home-town folks, unable to see the gestures, missed a good deal of the talk. And, what is worse, objected to paying the bill for the privilege of hearing their statesman.

Women Officials In Government Receive Praise

Mrs. Fickel Says Feminine "Sleeping Vote" Is Waking Up.

Women Government officials are capable executives. They ask no favors because of their sex, and there is no discrimination against them. They have justified the confidence placed in them, and their success has paved the way for women who will hold public office in the future.

Mrs. June Fickel, assistant director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, yesterday spoke proudly of the record made by women executives during the past year.

"Ability, not sex, now determines which person shall hold a job," Mrs. Fickel said. "We do not have to create jobs for women. There are many things they can do as well as men. And women no longer think they should have special favors just because they are women."

Mrs. Fickel pointed out that the record of Secretary Frances Perkins, especially, shows how much progress women have made in executing the duties of public office.

"Miss Perkins had many obstacles to overcome," Mrs. Fickel said. "She was not only the first woman Cabinet member, but she went into office in a most critical time and she was not approved by the labor leaders. Today, however, her record is one of the best of any Cabinet member, and she has the enthusiastic support of labor.

"All the women given executive positions have made good. We have not had a single complaint about the women we have placed. Undoubtedly women will hold many important Government positions in the future."

Women in general have awakened to the need for them to take an intelligent interest in their Government, according to Mrs. Fickel.

"A large part of our sleeping vote has always been women," she said. "But when they saw the security in their homes and the comfort of their children threatened, they knew the time had come for them to act. They did. More women voted in the last election than at any time since they received the vote, and these women will continue to vote in the future.

"Personally I do not care whether a woman votes for one party or the other as long as she has studied the situation carefully and votes the way her intelligence and social consciousness directs. We do not want women who vote the Democratic ticket simply because their fathers and husbands do. We want intelligent women voters who think for themselves."

The women's division of the Democratic National Committee has recently established a reporter plan, which purposes to appoint 22 reporters in Democratic clubs all over the country. Each of these women is to study thoroughly one phase of the Roosevelt recovery program, discuss it with other members of the clubs, and report on it at the meetings.

"We are living in one of the most critical, important eras in our history," Mrs. Fickel said. "It is the duty of every woman to have an intelligent grasp of what is going on. You will not help pull the Nation through the crisis by sitting back and saying 'Oh, I'll leave everything to the Administration.' "

Speaking of the many recent statements that President Roosevelt is planning a dictatorship or a socialized state, Mrs. Fickel said:

"If the persons who make these statements will look back over the congressional records they will see the President has only used the authority given him by Congress and he has not attempted to wrest any power from Congress."

Although Mrs. Elizabeth B. Davis has retained her Southern charm—she was born in Nashville, Tenn., within the shadow of The Hermitage, Andrew Jackson's home (upper left)—there is nothing languorous about the way this woman lawyer represents the United States Government in tax cases. At her office in the Denrike Building (uper right) she prepares briefs and gathers evidence for cases she presents before the Department of Justice.

White Favored In Spring Mode, Authority Says

Yellows and Blues Hold Second and Third Places.

Hollywood, March 19 (U.P.).—If present indications show which way the wind is blowing, it will be a white spring, says Walter Plunkett.

A quick glimpse into any smart resort reveals that white, from morning to night, either in complete ensembles or touched with contrasting colors is the most popular vogue of the year, he says.

Second in choice is yellow, from the pale lemon tint to corn-gold and then follows the family of blues with their sky, lotus and navy shades, the latter always splashed with pale pink or frilly or tailored white.

Wide hats are due for tremendous vogue. Whether or not this be a last flare-up of the Mae West influence is not known, but wide hats are blossoming everywhere; in the shop windows, on the heads of Southern resort visitors, and in the pages of smart style magazines.

Pioneering designers are making much of printed and crinkled crepes, and knitted ensembles are quite the rage this spring. They will be seen on everyone, from 16 to 60. There are sweaters of every variety, with wool or heavy silk skirts; one piece dresses with jacket and twin sets, and knitted coats.

One of the most ravishing knits of the season found in one of the most exclusive boulevard shops is made like a monk's robe with the neckline gathered in with cord.

Woman Miner Wants To Return to Work

Caliz, Ohio, March 20 (U.P.).—Ida Mae Stull, Ohio's only woman coal miner, has addressed a personal appeal to Gov. George White to permit her to return to work in a coal mine pit here.

In her appeal to the Governor, Miss Stull said the work was needed to keep her off the county charity list.

She charged that as part owner of the mine she was exempt from provisions of a State law which forbids women from mining coal underground.

You Know Me Not.

By Katherine Smith.

You read me; each offending sin
Or happy virtue lies before
Your vision, and you speak of them
With insight too uncanny. More,
You find in me the things that I
Have never found but always sought,
But I can only smile and say,

Youthful Editor Denounces Debauched Older Generation

Considers His Elders' Behavior in Community Play Entirely Too Alcoholic; Town's Mayor Recommends He Be Spanked.

Rockville Center, L. I., March 20.—Youth has taken a lesson from the worm and turned. The adolescents of Rockville Center have found a leader. And he has examined the morals of his elders and found them lacking. What is more, he has published his findings.

For Harold Whitney, 18-year-old editor and publisher of the Leader, an ultra-independent weekly published for students, took his typewriter in hand to write a little dramatic criticism of "The Dream of a Clown," a three-act burlesque played by local talent drawn from the ranks of the community's leading professional and business men. The play enjoyed a two-day run at the high school auditorium Friday and Saturday, and netted more than $400 for the South Nassau Communities Hospital.

Young Whitney put his editorial ear to the ground, kept his eyes open, then retired to his office of publication. He thought of the ringing editorials he had read only a few years ago of flaming youth, hip-flask toting boys and girls and adolescent misbehavoir in general. The dramatic criticism became a scathing editorial which made the older citizens of the community burn behind the ears and avert their eyes when they encountered a member of the moral younger generation. Young America's denouncement of adult America was expressed as follows:

"We want to state emphatically that any time it is necessary for a public institution of mercy to depend for its source of revenue upon a group of locally prominent men so forgetting their reputations to the extent that they must indulge in a public exhibition of drunkness, as was the case Friday night, then it is time for such an institution to close its doors in disgrace.

"For the second time in less than a year the youth of Rockville Centre have been treated to the spectacle of seeing men whom they had hitherto regarded with respect act like drunken jackasses for the benefit of a public institution.

"A play ceases to be either humorous, dramatic or beneficial when pages in said production announce the characters as they enter with the proviso that 'they will be introduced if they are still sober back stage.'

"According to one prominent man who retained enough common sense to remain sober—if the play had lasted half an hour longer, over half of the cast would have had to be carried in.

"If the future dramatic efforts of this village are to carry on in this unwarranted fashion we demand that they be advertised as just another drunken debauchery; so that the vast majority of the young people who still retain their aversion to witnessing drunkards make public spectacles of themselves, may save their time, their money and their civic pride."

Half of Rockville Center frowned deeply, the other half grinned. Mayor Horace L. Allen was greatly disturbed about the young journalist's editorial.

"It was outrageous, terrible, awful," said the mayor. "The boy ought to be spanked!" The other members of the cast—there were 62—many of them playing feminine roles—merely laughed.

Girl Swimmer Avoids Parties And Frivolities

Cocktail parties, dances, and all the other frivolities that make young girls' lives joyous have no place in the schedule of Miss Claudia Eckert, Northwestern University freshman and champion diver of the Central States, who is in Washington to participate in the National A. A. U. junior high board championship meet.

Claudia practices her swimming and diving three hours daily, sleeps from ten to twelve hours, works hard at her studies in the Physical Education School at Northwestern, and does a few sketches in her spare time.

"So you can see, I really don't have time to go to parties and things like that," she said yesterday. "I would like to very much, but I am hoping to get to the Olympics in 1936; and that means hard work. And I would much rather be an Olympic star than the most popular girl at a dance.

"I suppose it is all in the way you look at a thing. My father is a swimming and diving coach, and all my life I have wanted to be a swimming or diving champion. So I am used to spending my time at the pool instead of at parties. Some day I hope to be an instructor myself."

Certainly, many a girl might envy Claudia the honors and medals her hard work has brought her. She has won enough medals to encircle her waist three times. And she has won the medal given by the Chicago Tribune for the 100-yard swimming contest four years in succession, the only girl to make this record.

Nonaggressive Field Claimed Happiest Choice for Fair Sex

Mental Attitude of Men in the Family Is Important Factor in Helping or Hindering Woman's Career, According to Mrs. Elizabeth B. Davis, Tax Expert.

Government work is a magnet for all types and conditions of women. Some of the workers come to Washington equipped with little more than high school diplomas, business courses, and the will to succeed in whatever branch of the Government they are placed. Other women, from backgrounds of culture and wealth, travel widely and acquire college degrees before they enter Government service.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

The majority of women who hold important positions with the Government began as typists or clerks and worked their way up. Mrs. Elizabeth B. Davis, an attorney in the tax division of the Department of Justice, is an exception.

As Miss Elizabeth Bailey she entered Government work by becoming private secretary to her father, Judge Bailey, of the District's Supreme Court. That was in 1919, a year after the Bailey family had come to Washington from Nashville, Tenn.

Mrs. Davis now represents the United States Government as attorney when tax cases are brought before the Court of Claims.

"It's hard to explain my work to the average person who has only a meager knowledge of law," said Mrs. Davis yesterday at her office in the Denrike Building. "Unlike criminal cases, my tax cases have very little of the human element in them. They're made up of technical terms and legal phraseology instead of eloquent pleas and startling testimony."

This woman attorney, nevertheless, finds her work intensely interesting. When a case is assigned to her she has complete charge of it until it is finished. She takes the testimony, writes the brief, and presents the argument.

Took Law Course.

Mrs. Davis took her law course at George Washington University while she was working for her father. She had attended Vanderbilt University in Nashville for three years and had been graduated from Vassar. During her college days she had no particular career in mind; had considered teaching but was only too willing to give up that idea when her father offered her a job as his secretary.

She worked for the judge until 1927. In that year she was appointed to the Board of Tax Appeals. Persons who believe they have been assessed too highly may appear before the board and ask to be reassessed before they pay their taxes. It was Mrs. Davis' task to write up legal opinions of the cases brought before the board.

At the end of three years she was given an attorney's status. At the end of another three years she was appointed to the Department of Justice's tax division.

Unless a woman lawyer is an aggressive type, she has a better chance with the Government than with a private practice, believes Mrs. Davis.

She's No Feminist.

"I'm no feminist who thinks that women are as satisfactory as men in all professions and occupations," she declared. "And there are a great many persons who still find it difficult to have confidence in women lawyers and doctors. That is why I believe that an aggressive nature is necessary for a woman lawyer to build up a private practice."

Mrs. Davis may not be a feminist, but she is altogether feminine. In addition to her work for the Department of Justce she is homemaker for her father as well as for her husband.

"Is it difficult to combine business and domesticity?" she asked. "Well, to tell you the truth, I've done it for years without stopping to think whether it was difficult When my mother died about ten years ago it was up to me to take care of the home for my father and younger brothers and sisters.

Has Modern Husband.

"I think this matter of successfully combining business with housekeeping depends to a large extent on the men in one's family," she continued. "My father and husband are both extremely interested in my work. They're modern men. If they were the old-fashioned conventional sort, I suppose they would prefer for me to spend my days darning socks and cooking."

Mrs. Davis' husband found his wife's work so interesting that he decided to become a lawyer himself. He is now in his last year at law school.

Read in tomorrow's Post of a woman who is as familiar with law books as most women are with cook books.

Co-eds Man Led, Vassar College Head Declares

St. Paul, March 16 (A.P.).—Co-eds and students in women's colleges all powder their pretty noses—but, a woman's college girl does not permit mere man to lead her about by that pretty powdered nose.

That, in substance, is the difference between the average American co-ed and a women's college student, Dr. Henry Noble McCracken, president of Vassar College, observed today.

"In the average coeducational school," said Dr. McCracken, "the woman student does what the men do. Her courses of study are more or less manmade."

"However, in a women's college," he added, "a girl learns to become self-reliant. She studies what she wants to study. She is not dependent on college men to show the way in an educational pursuit."

Women Voters Plan Forum

Farley's Assistant to Give Party Viewpoint on Question.

Ambrose O'Connell, executive assistant to Postmaster General Farley, chief dispenser of Democratic patronage, will give the party point of view on the question of the merit system in Government personnel appointments, at the morning session of the District League of Women Voters Citizenship School on Saturday, in the Washington Hotel. The viewpoint of the Civil Service Commission will be given by Ismar Baruch, chief of the Commission's Personnel Classification Division.

Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, will discuss "personnel problems of a new Federal agency" as guest of honor, and Representative Lamar Jeffers, of Alabama, chairman of the House Committee on Civil Service, will speak at the afternoon session on personnel legislation in this Congress.

The object of the one-day Citizenship School is to provide an opportunity for open forum discussion of timely questions important to the average citizen. The issue of the merit system versus the spoils system in Government personnel administration has aroused so much interest in Washington that the League of Women Voters organized the Citizenship School for the purpose of giving the question a public airing.

The League of Women Voters has repeatedly taken a stand in the past in favor of the merit system, and in its program for 1932-34 specifically stated that:

"Public officials require training, and for this reason a means of assuring appointment for ability is essential."

At Saturday's meeting all points of view will be presented, that of the political executive, the Federal employe, the nonpartisan student of public affairs and the taxpaying public. This is in line with the policy of the citizenship schools organized by the League of Women Voters in every State of the Union for a number of years.

Miss Belle Sherwin, president of the National League of Women Voters, will preside at the luncheon meeting Saturday. Mrs. Richard Hogue, president of the District League, at the morning session, and Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, chairman of the Department of Efficiency in Government of the New York League, at the afternoon session.

Sees Enlarging Horizon for Women

Mrs. June Fickel, assistant director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, believes women have proved themselves capable executives, and in the future they will hold more important positions.

American Girls Introduce Daniel Boone to Europeans

By new and interesting treatment of American history, two young women, one of them a former clerk of the Navy Department of Washington, have put over a venture in publishing that has attracted attention in France, England and America.

The young women are Miss Esther Holden Averill, formerly of Washington, and Miss Lila Stanley, of Paris. Through their Domino Press, they are issuing children's books on American history.

Esther Averill was 15 years old when she came to Washington from Connecticut, seeking to qualify for some form of service in the World War. Turned down by the Red Cross as too young, she took the Civil Service examinations, passed them and at 16 was working in a Government job. Later she attended Vassar College, and by 1925, after working a year or two on a newspaper in Bridgeport, Conn., had saved enough money to go to Paris.

Miss Averill planned to return to this country in a few months. But her return was delayed, and she will soon make her first visit heme, bringing with her the Domino Press.

Later, as a feature photographer's assistant, she covered the races, the salon and royal weddings, among the latter that of the new king and queen of Belgium. Shortly after the war, Miss Averill met Fedor Rojankovsky, young Russian illustrator, and told him of her desire to present the story of Daniel Boone.

In her study of French books, Miss Averill had found abundant traces of the Indian legend. She realized that a bibliography of European picture books on Indians would make a valuable contribution to Americana. She grasped also that there was no American story that charmed Europeans more than that of Daniel Boone. She conceived the idea of the Album of Daniel Boone, illustrated by Rojankovsky.

It took two years to bring out the book. The French edition in French was so successful that Miss Averill soon arranged to publish an English edition. The book received wide and favorable comment throughout Europe and America.

Miss Averill is now making plans to bring out a similar book dealing with some other American hero of children the world over.

Ambitious Young Diving Champion

Dentists "Pull" All Aches From 5-State Clinic

Casto, National Association Head, Only Speaker at Shoreham Frolic.

A banquet climaxed the second day of the Five-State Postgraduate Clinic last night at the Shoreham Hotel, followed by a stag party and floor show, described by Dr. W. W. Wyman, president of the District of Columbia Dental Society, as one of the most elaborate entertainments ever sponsored by the local association.

The only speech was made by Dr. Frank M. Casto, president-elect of the American Dental Association.

Yesterday was fraternity luncheon day, and meetings were held by members of Xi Psi Phi, Psi Omega, Delta Sigma Delta and Alpha Omega. A luncheon was arranged for the five State presidents attending the convention, Dr. Casto, and other guests.

Dr. Clyde H. Schuyler, of the New York University School of Dentistry, and Dr. F. Blaine Rhobotham, of Northwestern University, were the clinicians yesterday. The former discussed "Denture Prosthesis," and the latter spoke on "Children's Dentistry."

The three-day conclave ends today with a clinic discussion by Dr. Russell W. Bunting, of the University of Michigan, of "Diet and Caries."

Commissioner George E. Allen, Senators Henrick Shipstead and Royal S. Copeland, Surgeons General H. S. Cumming of the Public Health Service, P. S. Rossiter, Navy, and Robert U. Patterson, Army; Commander Harvey, vice president of the American Dental Association; Dr. Clord Heck Marvin, president, George Washington University; Dr. Coleman Nevils, president, Georgetown University; Dr. Harry Bear, of Richmond, Va.; Dr. C. Willard Camalier, trustee of the American Dental Association; the Rev. John Gipprich, S. J., regent, Georgetown University Medical School; Dr. J. Ben Robinson, dean of the School of Dentistry, University of Maryland; Dr. William N. Cogan, dean of the School of Dentistry, Georgetown University; Dr. Prentiss Willson, president, D. C. Medical Society; Dr. James G. Ferguson, jr., president, Maryland Dental Society; Dr. Daniel J. Casey, president, Delaware Dental Society; Dr. H. E. Summers, president, West Virginia Dental Society; Dr. S. D. Kent, president, Virginia Dental Society, and Dr. Ernest A. Branch, president, North Carolina Dental Society.

Chicago, March 20 (AP).—Virginia Pine, Chicago matron who decided to become a movie star and did, shook herself free of her husband today.

Virginia, hitherto known to Chicago as Mrs. Virginia Pine Lehmann, wife of Edward J. Lehmann, jr., won an uncontested decree of divorce granted in Cook County Circuit Court.

Sea Killing Trial Held Up.

New York, March 20 (U.P.).—The trial of Andrew Kirwan, 23, charged with stabbing Gillian Sessoms, of Seattle, on the Dollar liner President Garfield, was postponed until Friday. He is the first person to be tried for murder in Federal court in the last 13 years.

Muir Asks Halt In Trade Laws

Former NRA Aid Asserts "Hands-off" Policy Is Vital Now.

Chicago, March 20 (AP).—Malcolm Muir, former assistant administrator of the National Recovery Administration at Washington, today urged a moratorium on business legislation.

Speaking before the Illinois Manufacturers Association, he said business should be given some assurance that there would not be a repetition of the "air mail fiasco."

"To provide a free flow of private capital," he said, "the investing public must be restored to confidence. I believe it is time to declare a moratorium on Government acts affecting business and give the NRA plan of self-regulation an opportunity to work before applying corrective measures.

"Some indication that the Administration will not in the future resort to such devastating tactics will do much to reassure industry," he said, "the psychology of 'hands off' policy for a reasonable length of time would, I believe, work wonders."

Fake Family Tree Racket Is Exposed As "Big Business"

Philadelphia, March 20 (AP).—Uncle Sam's agents say J. Montgomery Seaver, 42, made $100,000 in five years by digging around the roots of family trees and reporting they extended down to William the Conqueror, Richard the Lionhearted and other notables of yore.

He had three offices in Philadelphia and one in Washington, but it was a "racket," Postal Inspector A. T. Hawksworth testified in the United States District Court yesterday. Seaver was given a 15-month sentence in the Federal penitentiary.

Twenty-two persons testified they had paid Seaver $10 for a book of family history and $3 for a coat of arms. Hawksworth said the "racket" ended when Seaver failed to keep the printing presses going fast enough.

Secret Caucus Scans Tax Bill

West Virginia Legislators Seek Final Law from Two Proposed.

Charleston, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—With Senator A. B. Abbott (Democrat), Fayette, presiding, the five Senators and five Delegates comprising the legislative conference committee on the emergency revenue bills today sat in executive session.

Led by Delegate Rush D. Holt (Democrat), Lewis, several delegates opposed secret session, but the committee remained adamant and Gov. Kump stated that, while ordinarily favoring open hearings, he could see that it would be better in the present circumstances not to make them public.

Chief differences are between Gov. Kump's revenue bill calling for a 2 per cent consumers' sales tax, a 20 per cent luxury tax and a 60 per cent increase of corporation taxes, and the Senate's own bill calling for a consumers' sales tax of 3 per cent and an increase of only 20 per cent in the corporation tax.

Liquor Board Plans Action Against Nine

House Hearing Today to Study Bills Amending District Act.

Action against five retailers and four wholesalers is expected to be taken in a few days by Alcoholic Beverage Control Board as a result of complaints of Maj. Jerome Johnstone, chief liquor inspector, that they are not complying with the regulations.

Any disciplinary action will be contingent upon a report of chemists who are making analyses of wines purchased on suspicion that they were above 14 per cent alcoholic content. All the complaints against retailers involve holders of licenses to sell light wines and beers.

Under the law any wine having an alcoholic content in excess of 14 per cent is deemed a hard wine and may not be sold by a holder of a light wines and beers license. The offenses charged to the wholesalers involve violation of the law which forbids the sale by them of any beverage which may not be resold by the vendee.

Finds Labels Mutilated.

In two instances, Maj. Johnstone disclosed, the bottle labels showed evidence of having been mutilated. In one case the label marking which read "not more than 16 per cent alcohol by volume" had been inked and for it was substituted: "Not more than 14 per cent alcohol by volume."

Chairman George W. Offutt declared: "We are going to insist that everyone observe the letter of the law. If necessary, we will start revoking licenses for offenses such as these. In the past we have been inclined to be lenient toward persons who were guilty of minor infractions of the law, because there did not appear to be any willful violations. However, we are going to become more severe in dealing even with the minor violations.

Meantime, a public hearing on three bills to amend the District liquor act will be held by the House District Committee this morning at 10:30 o'clock in room 345, of the House Office Building.

Cummings Inspired Bills.

The bills are an outgrowth of suggestions by Attorney General Cummings. They were introduced by Representatives Black (Democrat), of New York; Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Weideman (Democrat), of Michigan.

The Black bill would amend section 5 so as to permit members or employes of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to own stock in a corporation storing alcoholic beverages. It would still bar them from holding stock in a corporation manufacturing or transporting spirits.

The Weideman bill would broaden the licensing provisions of Section 15 by permitting off-sale sales of both spirits and light wines and beers in residential-use areas as defined by the zoning act. The law now permits only the sale of prescription whisky in these areas.

Dirksen's bill would remove the requirement that druggists fill liquor prescriptions only with straight whisky and not with blended liquor.

There has also been considerable agitation, especially by representatives of the chain stores, for removal of the one-license limitation.

LoudounKeeps 1933 Tax Rate In New Budget

Leesburg, Va., March 20 (Spl.). Loudoun County's tax rate will not be increased this year, if the tentative budget proposed by the supervisors yesterady is adopted at the regular meeting in April.

The budget calls for a levy of 80 cents, the same as last year, and an expenditure of $45,000 for county purposes and $82,500 for the schools.

The board overruled objection by Supervisor Baker that the road levy in Lovettsville district be abolished, and reduced it from 10 cents to 5 cents. This is to take care of past debts. Extra district school levies remain the same as last year.

E. E. Garrett, Leesburg attorney, urged the board to rescind a former resolution prohibiting the use of the courthouse green for union religious services in July and August.

Judge J. R. H. Alexander claimed full responsbility for the former resolution, saying there was danger from the electric wires strung for lighting the grounds for this purpose and much damage was done to the courthouse green. The board deferred action on Garrett's plea.

Action on a proposition made by Dan Hollenga, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, that Loudoun join with ten other counties in advertising northern Virginia, was held over until later. According to Mr. Hollenga, who appeared before the board, the advertising would cost the county, $1,438.

The administrator of the estate of William Eaton, jr., of Grottoes, is seeking $10,000 damages from the estates of George Olinger and Harry Strickler, of New Market, owners of the plane. All three were killed when the plane crashed last July.

The plaintiff contends that Olinger, the pilot, was stunting and threw the plane into a tailspin which led to the fatal crash.

The defense insists that the accident was unavoidable and also that Eaton had made a trade for the plane and was having it demonstrated to him. Olinger had been taking up passengers before the fatal flight.

"Dad cautioned me before I left I shouldn't be dishonest under any circumstances," said Miss Graham. "When my money was gone and I couldn't even get a chance, there seemed to be no other way. Now, things are different. Even if the screen test isn't successful I'll never try to end my life."

Church Protests Nearby Rum Sale

Fredericksburg Baptsits Oppose Grill Permit.

Soret, proprietor of the Southern grill, because his application for license for the sale of beer, wine and ale has been formally protested by the Fredericksburg Baptist Church, adjacent to the grill.

The resolution contends that "the sale and consumption of beer, wine, and ale . . . in the very doors, as it were, of their house of worship, would be objectionable, deleterious to the atmosphere which should surround such property, and of demoralizing effect upon the minds and characters of young people and little children who attend the Sunday school."

Thirty-five other establishments have published their intention to apply for alcoholic beverage licenses.

The new trials were ordered on the ground that improper evidence had been submitted.

The session was formally closed after the presiding officers sent to the governor 286 bills and appointed a half dozen commissions.

Gov. Peery now has before him the bills which must be signed within the next ten days, exclusive of Sundays unless they are allowed to die without his signature. Among these measures are the Dejarnette Sanitarium bill, and the milk bill, for which the Governor today called public hearings.

Before the Governor also are the Daughton boxing bill, legalizing boxing up to ten rounds, and the libel bill.

A question had arisen, when members of the Assembly arrived for the constructive session, as to whether the General Assembly actively was in session. Some contended it was and it was the duty of the legislators to elect a successor to Col. Saunders. However, they decided that the legislators was in session only technically, and that the appointment should be left to the Governor.

Senate Plugs Holes in D. C. Gaming Laws

Minimum Heat, Railroad Electrification Bills Also Passed.

More strength was placed by the Senate yesterday into antigambling laws of the District.

Possession of gambling paraphernalia and notations is made prima facie evidence of intent to violate the prohibition laws against setting up a gaming table under an approved bill drafted in the office of the United States District Attorney.

District Attorney Garnett urged its passage before the Senate District Committee, with the declaration that Congress should repeal the law against gambling or make it more effective. Senator King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the committee, told of difficulties encountered by police and prosecuting officials in efforts to convict operators of gambling establishments.

School children were induced to play the so-called numbers games which have taken root in the National Capital, Senator King said. The bill was passed without further discussion.

Three other measures were passed by the Senate. One was the Copeland bill, requiring landlords to furnish a minimum amount of heat in quarters where they contracted to do so. The bill fixes as a minimum temperature of 68 degrees between 7 a. m. and 10 p. m. Senator Copeland answered challenges to its constitutionality by pointing out court decisions in New York. When health commissioner of that city the Senator fathered a heat law which was sustained in the courts and remains in effect.

Electrification of steam railroads in the District is authorized in another bill passed by the Senate. The measure was introduced at the instance of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which was loaned $77,000,000 by the Public Works Administration to complete electrification of its lines between New York and Washington. Passage of the measure was recommended by the District Commissioners.

Despite opposition of the Commissioners, however, the Senate passed a bill to exempt from taxation property owned by the Daughters of 1812.

Bluege Pushed Aside While Travis Gets Chance at 3d-Base Berth

Vet Assigned As Cronin's Understudy

Manush, Cronin, Kuhel, Schulte, Harris do Real Slugging.

By Shirley L. Povich,
Sports Editor of The Post.

BILOXI, Miss., March 20.—Third base is the topic again today, folks, despite all our good resolutions to lay off the Bluege-Travis situation, which already has been diagnosed, dissected, analyzed and annihilated by this correspondent until the telegraph companies are in a fair way toward declaring dividends again.

But there were some concrete developments today, so significant in their nature that I fain would dilate on the matter once more.

Manager Joe Cronin this afternoon showed his hand plainly when he announced that Bluege would confine his spring training and exhibition-game duties to understudy Cronin at shortstop, while the young Mr. Travis would play third in all the regular infield drills and during the half-dozen training games on the schedule.

Sentiment Shifting.

Thus official sentiment appears to be veering toward the red-cheeked, 20-year-old Travis as the regular third baseman of the Nats, prompted by Cronin's desire to graft a bit more hitting power onto the Washington Club by the presence of the lusty-socking rookie.

In his deep-seated plans to replace the venerable but aging Bluege with young Travis, Cronin has the solid backing of Owner Clark Griffith, who is eager to speed the development of the rookie and retrench his infield with a lad who promises ten years of brilliant protection at third base if he makes good.

There is reason for doubt, too, that Cronin and Griffith believe in the efficacy of the newly acquired eyeglasses which Bluege brought to camp this season in an effort to correct his batting vision and prolong his big league life, which is ebbing under the combined assaults of Daddy Time and the hard-hitting Travis. The glasses are regarded as a concession by Bluege that he is slipping.

Travis to Go Route.

Announcing that Bluege would be withdrawn from the Regulars' line-up and relegated to shortstop for the Scrubs in the first game tomorrow between the Regulars and the Yannigans, Cronin said that Travis would play third throughout the nine innings for the Regulars instead of sharing the berth with the veteran, as previously planned.

Cronin's new third base plans went into effect in the practice this morning when Travis occupied the third base territory throughout the workout, while Bluege confined himself to playing shortstop.

So intent are Cronin and Griffith on the development of Travis as a third baseman that it was reported here that Bluege would not make the entire barnstorming trip North, but would leave for Washington direct from Memphis, while Travis would accompany the team to Chicago for third base duties in the two exhibition games with the Cubs.

Travis' Fielding Improved.

Travis' fielding, which last year was best described as a Travesty on Bluege's, has shown notable improvement during the workouts here under the tutelage of Cronin, who has been working after hours with the rookie to perfect his mechanics of infield play.

Bluege is accepting the new order of things on the club philosophically and biding his time until the season starts. There is still no reason to suspect that Travis can field in the same breath with Bluege, and the rookie must outhit the veteran by at least 20 points to prove more valuable to the club, a matter that remains to be seen.

The irony of the situation that has placed Bluege at shortstop as the understudy of Manager Cronin is the accepted fact that Bluege can field rings around Cronin even at the short stop position, but must bow again to the superior hitting of his rival.

Great Utility Man.

However, in the event that Travis makes good as a third baseman, the Nats will be blessed with the best utility infielding in the league in the presence of Bluege.

Day by day the hhitters are getting some better pitching to look at with the regular hurlings beginning to experiment with their curves. Today, the powerhouse of the Nats' attack, Manush, Cronin, Schulte and Kuhel were lambasting the ball to the extremes of Biloxis vast ballyard. Dave Harris continued as the power boy of the afternoon squad, hitting a bal ltoday that was heading for Bermuda when last seen.

Prospects Brighter for Crack Amateurs to Meet Tilden, Vines.

NEW YORK, March 20 (AP).—Chances of the two ranking amateur tennis layers of the world, Fred Perry, of England, and Jack Crawford, of Australia, meeting Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines, the leading professionals, during the year appeared brighter today following a telephone conversation between Tilden and the Sydney, Australia, telegraph.

The representative of the Sydney paper told Tilden he had talked with Perry by telephone this morning and that the English Davis Cup star was in accord with a challenge thrown out by Big Bill if it was possible for it to work out. Crawford also was quoted as ready to match strokes with Tilden and Vines.

U. S. Site Preferred.

"We would attempt to make the match almost any place," said Tilden. "But the logical place would be in the United States during the American season or when the players are at Wimbledon for the Davis Cup series and the English championships."

Tilden recently proposed he and Vines play the two amateurs on any of four conditions: with no admission being charged spectators, with paid admissions and the entire receipts t obe given to charity, for a side bet of $5,000 each, or for no money at all.

Alabama Pointer Wins Luray Trials

Staunton Dog Is Second in All-Age Stake.

Luray, Va., March 20 (AP).—Brownie's Ranger, owned by Thomas Moore, of Alabama, won first place in the all-age stake of the Page Valley field trials here today.

Deaver's Rockbridge Rip, owned by Virgil Hawse, of Staunton, was second, and Mate Baird, owned by Capt. Woodruff, of Baltimore, was third. All are pointers. Beaux, a setter, owned by Howard Eyster, of York, Pa., ran in the second series with the three winners of yesterday. Beaux found a covey and a single.

Rockbridge Rip did not run as wide a race, but made an excellent find, stopped at command for the flush and shot.

Mate Baird ran a good ground searching heat.

All the Blame in Hockey

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, March 20 (Spl.).—The current ice hockey play-offs are casting the bright light of publicity upon the somewhat dubious position of goal tender for major league teams. The physical condition of oue Andrew Aitkenhead, pit keeper for the New York Rangers, has been discussed at some length in the public prints and the consensus is that the young athlete is on the verge of a nervous breakdown, or, vulgarly, an aggravated case of les jitteurs as we used to say in Dijon, or was it Passe?

My tattle-tales advise me that Aitkenhead's shakes are purely the results of his labors as a target during a season of scheduled games, that he is a model young man who neither drinks nor smokes nor chews and that once before the approach of the Stanley Cup matches gave him an attack of the jeebies. This is unfortunate because those hockey players can flip a puck through the hole in a doughnut and if a goal tender gets to quivering the least bit they will start timing his quivers and begin to shoot the puck between them.

The Rangers have a very gallant and picturesque old athlete as a manager, a Canadian named Lester Patrick, who once when his goalie was ripped to shreds by a charge of the Maroons in a Stanley Cup match, eased his creaking joints off the bench, donned greaves and buckler once more and took to the nets. The Rangers won the cup that year. This thrilling saga of the rinks may be repeated because the Rangers have not succeeded in getting a substitute goalie.

But I was in the mood to discourse further upon the hazards, risks and perils of goal-keeping in defense of Master Aitkenhead so that none might unwittingly cry him sissy. The gals in ermine and white fox who sit in the boxes and the promenade seats clap their tinted hands and yodel ecstatically when the wing-men and forwards flex their muscles and go dashing madly up and down the ice. The maidens in the arena and the mezzanine swoon with joy when the burly defense men interpose their padded porches as some lunatic attacker comes charging down the ice. But who heaves a sigh for the gallant goalies? Who, I ask? You, dear? That's nice. That's a good girl. Heave it right over there by the davenport and the man will get it when he comes around to clean up.

The goalie, of course, gets blamed for everything. The forwards may be picking their teeth, the center waving to his girl in the balcony and the defense men paring their finger nails when the attack sweeps down the ice, but if the goalie lets the little black rubber disk flip past him and into the net it is HIS FAULT. Everybody turns around and looks at him as though he did it on purpose.

Fifty and 60 times a night the rock-hard, solid rubber disk is sent sizzling at him. They come from far down the ice, long trick pitches that are difficult to follow because, on a long shot, the black puck will get lost against the dark background of crowds. I have seen goals scored from mid-ice that any child could have stopped. But a moment's refraction of light, or a black dinner coat in the audience, and the damage was done. By the time he found it again, it had slid past him and into the goal.

Likewise, they are fired at him from a distance of 3 feet, and the shooters aren't fooling. If a shot were to hit him in the face from 5 feet, and one sometimes does, he can lose an eye, or at the least get his scalp slit open.

But even farther indignities are added. The attackers come whooping and yelling down and foregather with the defenders at the very mouth of the goal, where they stage most disgraceful brawls that are a welter of legs, arms, steel skate blades and shinny sticks. At the bottom of this welter, like truth, the goalie may usually be found searching himself and his immediate surroundings for the puck, with a curious and intense concentration, for all the world like a soldier delousing his shirt seam in the midst of terrific shell and shrapnel fire. His comrades are hacking, clawing, scratching, biting, slashing, kicking and swinging, and a hockey stick is not exactly a maiden's kiss. The goalie crawls under their legs looking for the puck so that when he finds it he can throw it away. This sort of thing eventually will get on your nerves. My sympathies to Master Aitkenhead.

The other dates in the schedule announced today are: May 5, Baltimore Polytechnic; May 19, Mercersburg Academy, of Mercersburg, Pa.

Virginia Tech Has Need of Pitchers

Three Starting Hurlers Sought: Sutherland Only Survivor.

BLACKSBURG, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Macauley McEver, young baseball mentor at Virginia Tech, must develop three starting pitchers for the campaign this spring in which his team will defend the Big Four title ti won his first season as varsity coach.

Sid Sutherland, of Hopewell, is the only survivor from the mound staff that wound up the 1933 season with six straight victories. Ten candidates include Emory Minnich, Julian Lindsay and Leroy Jennings, who pitched in one or two games apiece last year but were not regulars. Bill Saunders and Charles Detwiler are coming up with fair freshman records. Two others, Virgil Deitrick and Mel Johnson, made good in intramural ranks.

Three-Star Outfield.

Tech's young coach almost forgets his mound troubles when he watches his three-star outfield of Al Casey, Benny Palmer and Bryan Bell, in action. These three veterans possess batting power, fielding skill and are fast and clever on the bases. So are Johnny Yorke and Paul Kelsey, veteran backstop.

"Mac" also has no forries at second base, where Henry Downing, who hit .418 last year, is a fine defensive player, too. Tom Pickup is returning to his post at shortstop, assuring a fast keystone combination. Al Pruitt may be the choice to succeed Davis Weede at third. The loss of Captain-elect Charley Cottle, a terrific hitter and star first-sacker, who failed to pass his work, was a blow. Lefty Mohler and Red Mitchell are battling for his place.

Cumberland All-Star Court Team Selected

Cumberland, Md., March 20 (Spl.).—Dr. Thomas W. Koon made the presentation of prizes at the conclusion of SS. Peter and Paul basket ball tournament at the Fayette Street gymnasium.

The individual star of the tournament was Mel Henry, guard of Umstot's Upstarts, who carried off three prizes.

The all-tourname team of Offutt, Keyser Pee Wees and King, SS. Peter and Paul, forwards; Miller, Umstot's center, and Henry, Umstot's, and Holmes, SS. Peter and Paul, guards, received bronze Medals.

King College Gridmen Start Spring Practice

Bristol, Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Determined to get the jump on a good season next fall, King College football candidates yesterday launched their spring practice, to continue for about three weeks.

New material promises much for the 1934 eleven, Commander W. A. Richardson, coach, said today.

The squad will be divided into two groups and a game will be played once a week during the spring session. Training will continue "until we get what we want out of it," Richardson declared.

Jones Beaten In Augusta Foursome

Appears Tired, Gets 76; Two-Ball Event to Be Held Today.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 20 (AP).—Bobby Jones, paired with Ed Dudley, took a sound lacing today from Paul Runyan, the professional ace of the winter season, and Horton Smith. The Jones-Dudley combination was beaten, 6 and 5.

Runyan, regarded as the professionals' leading contender in the masters' invitation tournament starting Thursday, and Smith, New York pro, had 71s, one under par, while Jones and Dudley, Augusta pro, had 76s. The little White Plains, N. Y., star played the second nine in 34 strokes. Jones was even par coming in after straying to a high 40 on the front nine.

Approaches Off Line.

Bobby appeared tired and was off line with approaches. He sliced his drive into the woods on the ninth and failed to sink a sizable putt during the round. Today was the last available for practice rounds, for tomorrow most of the players are entered in the two-ball foursome competitions, a preliminary attraction to the big four-day medal play tournament.

Jones will play with Ross Somerville, the Toronto star who won the U. S. Amateur in 1932, ni the two-ball event. Other combinations include Bill Mehlhorn and Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn; Johnny Golden, Noroton Conn., and Billy Burke, Cleveland; Leo Deigel, Philadelphia, and MacDonald Smith, Nashville; Runyan and Horton Smith; Frank Walsh and Harry Cooper, of Chicago; and George Dunlap, jr., National Amateur Champion from Pinehurst, and Emmett French, Southern Pines, N. C., pro.

Johnny Farrell arrived today and Walter Hagen and Billy Burke, other rivals of Jones for years, wired they would come tonight or tomorrow. The cash prizes announced today list $1,500 for the winning professional. Second place will be worth $800, third position, $600, and fourth, $500. The $5,000 will be distributed among the low dozen players.

Jones reiterated an earlier statement that, should he finish among the leaders, he would accept none of the prizes.

Plans for playing all tournament competition in the afternoons were discarded today and decision was made to start around 10 a. m. A field of approximately 65 will play.

The pairings for the first round of the masters' tournament Thursday send Jones and Runyan out together at 10:35. Other prominent pairings include Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, and Tom Creavy, Albany, N. Y., at 11:25; Frank Walsh and Leo Diegel at 12:30; Ross Somerville and Henry Picard, Charleston, 12:55; Johnny Golden and Mortie Dutra, Detroit, at 1:20; Bobby Cruick-Richmond, and Johnny Farrell, St. Augustine, at 1:45; Denny Shute, Philadelphia, and Craig Wood, Deal, N.J., at 2:05; Billy Burke, Cleveland, and Walter Hagen, Detroit, at 2:20; Billy Howell and Henry Cuici, New York, at 12:40.

Meeting at Ballston.

The Ballston A. C. will hold a meeting tomorrow at the Clarendon Bowling Alley at 8 p. m. in preparation for the coming season. All members are requested to be on hand.

Nats Call on Army To Aid Flag Battle

Biloxi, Miss., March 20 (Spl.).—The Washington ball club today invoked the aid of the United States Army in its effort to retain the American League pennant. Pitchers Bobby Burke and Ed Chapman were sent to the Veterans' Administration Hospital in Biloxi for treatment to their pitching arms, which have developed ailments in the spring practice.

Trainer Mike Martin recommended their visit today to the hospital where noted Army surgeons and doctors are available with complete physiotherapy equipment at their command. Both Burke and Chapman will undergo treatment with the radium lights.

Chapman has been suffering chiefly from sore muscles in his back. Burke has been ailing from his annual sore shoulder, which he always incurs in spring training.

Charlotte Glutting Wins at Pinehurst

Victor Over Mrs. Scheidt; Mrs. Haynes Wins.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 20 (AP).—Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey star and medalist in the thirty-seventh annual North and South golf tournament for women, paced her way into the second round today with a 4-and-3 victory over Mrs. Karl Scheidt, of Philadelphia.

Miss Aniela Gorczyca, Southern champion from Fort Worth, who turned four up on Mrs. J. W. Hoopes, of Kennett Square, Pa., continued her steady shooting and wound up winner, 6 and 4, after touring the last five holes she needed in three over men's par.

Mrs. J. J. Lawlor, New Rochelle, N. Y., accounted for the tourney's first upset by eliminating Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., winner of the Belleair championship, 2 and 1.

Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., was the victim of another upset at the hands of Deborah Verry, Worcester, Mass. Miss Verry laid her opponent a stymie on the seventeenth to take the lead and then won the home hole.

Dodgers Win; Didrikson A's Star

Scores, However, 42; Triple Play Is Made by Mackmen.

FORT MYERS, FLA., March 20 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers hit against Babe Didrikson, famous girl athelete of Texas, for one inning today, failed to get a hit off her or score a run, but recovered in time to beat out the Philadelphia Athletics, 4-to-2, in an exhibition game.

At a loss for a girl athlete to oppose Miss Didrikson, star of the women's track and field games in the 1932 Olympics, the Dodgers managed to equalize the situation with one of their extra special performances. Miss Didrikson walked Danny Taylor after getting a 3 and 2 count on him, nicked Johnny Frederick with a fast one, and then threw Joe Stripp a slow curve he hit into a triple play.

Dib Williams, at short for the A's, took Stripp's liner for the first out, tossed to Rabbit Warstler at second to double Taylor, and the Rabbitt's heave to Jimmy Foxx at first nipped Frederick before the latter could get back to the bag.

Gives Up Three Runs.

With that out of the way, and Didrikson with it, Ray Lucas and Charley Perkins, Dodger rookies, shared the Brooklyn pitching burden, allowing but eight hits. LeRoy Mahaffey followed Miss Didrikson for the A's and was touched for three runs in four innings. Alton Benton finished.

Jimmy Jordan, shortstop, got three of Brooklyn's eight hits.

Musing and El Puma Race to Dead Heat, First of Season, at Tropical Park

Moralist 3d, Pinched Off At Finish

Royal Gold Triumphs; Vishnu, Happy Scot Are Victorious.

MIAMI, Fla., March 20 (AP).—Musing, a 4-to-1 shot, and El Puma, the favorite, ran a dead heat today, one of racing's most unusual performances, in the seventh race at Tropical Park, a $700 claiming event for 4-year-olds and upward over 1 1-16 miles.

El Puma had a lead of only a head coming into the stretch, but Musing edged up and Moralist, which finished third, made a determined bid. In the run to the wire Musing just did get up and Moralist, pinched off, was only part of a length back.

It was the first dead heat of the season. First and second portions of the purse were divided by the two horses. El Puma paid $3.10 for $2, Musing $10.10.

Deadeye Dick Victor.

Hal Price Headley, Western sportsman and breeder, whose horses have come to the fore here of late, was represented by another winner when Deadeye Dick, a young gelding he bred himself, scored his first victory in the fourth event. Eight juveniles went postward for the half-mile dash. Deadeye Dick staged a strong stretch rush to get up in the final strides, beating W. F. Phelan's Merry Bud, a long shot, by a head in the fast time of 0:47 2-5. A. Papa's Rustic Joe lost the place by three lengths. The winner returned $9.50 straight.

Jockey Bobby Jones was in rare form today. In the first four events he won twice and finished second on the other two occasions. Bobby was off slowly astride Deadeye Dick, but he swung his mount up fast on the inside to reach a contending position behind Merry Bud and Rustic Joe. The latter faltered at the top of the stretch as Jones brought Deadeye Dick around Merry Bud. The son of Supremus outlasted Merry Bud in the final drive.

In High Triumphs.

Vishnu, for the third time in as many starts in Florida this season, was a losing favorite in the opening event. The veteran was beaten a head by In High, which returned $11.80. Billies Orphan was third, three lengths back. Vishnu and In High had the race between them all the way. The boys appeared to ride each other close in the stretch and a foul was claimed against the winner to no avail.

Some well regarded maidens performed in the second race. J. E. Widener's Chance Line finally found a field he could lick, the speedy colt racing on the head end virtually the entire six furlongs to register by two lengths. The Triumvir ran an improved race and was an easy second by four lengths over Biography. Chance Line was a $3.30 choice. His time was 1:11 4-5.

Happy Scot, with Coucci up, gave form players two in a row when he beat Dont Blush by nearly two lengths in the third. Hasty Peter, Try Fair and Steel followed, heads apart. Happy Scot easily disposed of Steel and Hasty Peter and had plenty left to thwart the closing challenge of Dont Blush. The winner paid $5.30.

Form players were all at sea after the fifth contest, in which Chastity and Appomattox, the two choices, finished out of the money. Silvio Coucci scored a double atop the $24.90 for $2-hazard, Royal Gold, which beat Flying Gypsy by four lengths in a gallop. Off Duty was third, a half length farther back. Royal Gold caught the tiring Appomattox at the top of the stretch and drew far clear. Chastity ran a very dull race, beating one horse after taking a whip-lashing.

Bichloride, running back to his good recent effort, was an easy winner of the sixth event at slightly better than 2 to 1. Drusus trailed the winner by three lengths and headed Bub McFarland. Hunter rated Bichloride behind Dancing Mack's early pace, shot his mount to the front when ready and won as he pleased. Drusus and Bub McFarland both made up ground to be in the picture.

Five Braves Rookies To Go to Harrisburg

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20 (U.P.). The weeding-out process which sent Ray Starr, right-handed pitcher, to the Minneapolis Club today, will result shortly in five young rookies going to Harrisburg, the Boston Braves' farm.

Morris Is Appointed Coach at Hamlin High

Hamlin, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.). Benjamin F. White, superintendent of Lincoln County Schools, announces the appointment of Byron Morris, former Ceredo-Kenova and Marshall College athletic star, as head coach and director of athletics at Hamlin, High School.

Morris has already assumed his new duties, succeeding Patrick Ax Quarles, who resigned to take up other work.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, an airplane does not dive straight down when it is diving straight down. That is to say, when an airplane is diving directly toward the earth the line of flight must be about 14 degrees beyond vertical.

This strange fact is due to the "lift" of the wings. The wings, in level flight, incline slightly upward at the leading edge, to give the plane enough lift to counteract the pull of gravity. When the plane is nosed straight down the lift of the wings carries it off its vertical course by about 14 degrees—an angle that amounts approximately to one-sixth of a right angle. To correct this a diving plane, in order to do a vertical dive, must dive somewhat beyond vertical.

Strange as it seems, Mary Griffin Stuart was born on February 28, married on February 28, and was buried on February 28.

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 20.

The horsemen seem to have forgotten last week's "strike" at Hialeah. Those who have shipping money are trying to hang on to it and those who haven't shipping money are trying to put over good things during the last of the season in this State. The entire horse colony is looking forward to a change of scenery. And, from the talk, it appears that all hands are Bowie bound.

The "daily double" rewarded with a $61.30 mutuel for $2. The horses were In High, 5-to-1 shot, and Happy Scot, 5-to-2 proposition. Mrs. Bennings' lovely youth had three winners in a row—Chance Line, Happy Scot and Deadeye Dick. BILL.

First race—Singing Heart turned in a fine performance here opening day and lost the decision by a lip. Gets in light tomorrow and I see no reason for mistakes. Transen will draw Coucci for a rider. Both the horse and the jockey are in fine shape. Bright Knight for the rest.

Second race—Im going to try to make Pass take another purse. Won in impressive style for us last out. Lofty Lady packs a lot of speed and will have something to say about the purse distribution. Mint Mission to take care of the others.

Fourth race—The Fairfields-Kilmer Entry of Try Sympathy and Sun Caprice is the logical choice in this group of maidens. Either one can step down on the front end. Synod has a fighting chance. Overstimulate has a good work-out in Clocker Mike's speed book.

Fifth race—One Chance beat a fair group of platers over at the other course and appears to have the edge over Mountain Elk in this mile and an eighth. Bright Beauty, in good form, will be ready if the top pair falter in the stretch.

Sixth race—I'm going away out on the limb here. Perhaps we can chase this baby home ahead of the field at a boxcar mutuel. The hot thing is Merrie Marie. We got acquainted up at Charles Town. This is a cheap field and I see a chance for the filly. Miss Donovan and Lauretta Nash for the rest.

Seventh race—Caerleon gets the call in the finale. Ft. Dearborn appears to have slipped but remains a threat among this brand. Darkling for the show.

New York Race Bill Hearings Tuesday

15 Per Cent Admission Tax Proposed; Commission Plan Urged.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 20 (AP). A bill designed to transfer supervision of horse racing in New York State to a new State commission, stripping the jockey club of most of its present authority, was introduced in the Legislature tonight.

The bill would impose a 15 per cent tax upon the total admission receipts of each track which its sponsor, Senator John J. Dunnigan, estimated would net the State $1,000,000 annually.

The proposed commission would consist of three persons named by the secretary of state to hold office for terms of two, four and six years, respectively, from Next May 1. Their successors would be appointed for full terms of six years.

The Jockey Club, governing body of the sport for the past half century, would be relieved of all its powers except keeping the breeding records and stud book and issuing licenses to owners, trainers and jockeys.

The bill will be given an airing at a legislative hearing next Tuesday at 2 p. m. At the same time views on proposed legislation to permit open betting will be heard. Measures are now before the Legislature intended to permit open betting immediately and to authorize a vote at the general election in 1935 to amend the constitution so as to permit pari-mutuel wagering.

THE TRIUMVIR was hard ridden all through stretch and finished very fast. BIOGRAPHY broke fast, was hustled along, ran well for five furlongs, then tired. The race should do him a world of good. BARDSTOWN closed a big gap. WILD ROSEBUD showed good early speed.

EL PUMA got away well, was rated along in the early part, moved up fast on outside, came to the finish on even terms with MUSING, creating a dead heat. MUSING displayed keen speed, saved ground, locked strides with EL PUMA and finished gamely. MORALIST made a determined bid turning out of back stretch, but was pinched back and came to the outside in final furlong and would have won in a few more strides. PENGADER, well up all the way, ran good race. POLAR SEA had speed for half a mile.

Stocks Jump Again as Labor Peace Looms

New York, March 20 (AP).—Moves toward industrial peace were accompanied by a quick revision of stock prices today as the market, with characteristic vigor, rallied during the last hour after a rather dismal performance in previous trading.

Presidential intervention in the automobile dispute following the White House warning to the railroad men found the market trying to recover from an abrupt slump just before noon.

Shorts scurried to cover when it appeared that the labor skies might be clearing, and their repurchases, together with other buying, brought a rapid upturn that established general net gains of 1 to 2 points or more. There was some late profit-taking but final prices were near the highs in a turnover of 1,586,640 shares. The average improvement of 1.7 points almost erased yesterday's loss.

Motor Issues Respond.

Motor issues responded briskly, Chrysler and General Motors rising about 2 points each and Nash and Hudson more than a point. Rails had early moments of sogginess but strengthened with other groups.

The market was closed when it became known that the carrier managements had agreed to a continuation of the present wage scale; the employes' reaction to this proposal was not immediately known. On the whole, Wall Street has been viewing the railroad situation more calmly than that in the automotive industry.

Silver and the stocks associated with it were firm, speculative sentiment having been obviously bolstered by House passage of the Dies bill. U. S. Smelting gave the most consistent performance; it was up nearly 2 net. Steels, which had been depressed by the prospect of smaller business in the event of motor strike, were fairly liberal gainers, though National Steel eased.

Forecast of Loadings.

Several prominent roads have already announced a traffic increase, and some thought the total would prove to be around 635,000 cars, an increase of about 20,000 over the previous week.

American Metal Market says the smaller movement of automobile steel has been partly offset by increases in other directions, including railroad material.

Miscellaneous demand continues to absorb "an altogether unusual proportion of total production, there being no large consuming line outside the automobile industry that is particularly active."

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

By Ralph West Robey.

Mr. A. W. Zelomek, economist and director of the International Statistical Bureau, has just made public some intensely interesting facts on retail trade. His figures in this field, beyond much question, are the best that we have. This does not mean that they are all that we should like, for of all statistics those on retail trade are about the hardest to collect, but they can be accepted as being as accurate as it has been possible to make them. They are especially significant just at this time because of the light they throw on some of the statements so frequently heard on the degree of improvement in business over a year ago.

According to Mr. Zelomek, the total expenditures for general merchandise last month, as reflected in mail order, general chain, department and variety store sales, were approximately $300,000,000. This represents an increase of 16.3 per cent over the corresponding month last year. As compared with the volume of sales in March of 1933, which was the low point, it reflects an increase of approximately one-third, or some $75,000,000. This comparison of February with last March, nevertheless, is more or less worthless because of the seasonal factor.

Increase Has Been Less Than That for Income.

For the purposes of analysis then we may take 16.3 per cent as the estimated increase in the volume of retail trade in February this year over February last year. This in itself is fairly impressive. Nevertheless, the increase here has been far less than the improvement in income within the period. According to Mr. Zelomek, the latter increased 38.5 per cent over February of 1933. The conclusion is reached, accordingly, that although we have had a handsome increase in retail trade it, by no means, has kept pace with the increase in purchasing power.

Before one goes too far with this conclusion, however, it is well to bring in a third factor. This is the question of the trend of prices during the period. As measured by the Fairchild retail price index, compiled by Mr. Zelomek, there has been an increase here of approximately 28 per cent over February of 1933. Quite obviously when this item is taken into consideration much of the apparent improvement in the figures for income and merchandise sales is eliminated.

Conclusions on Change Vary According to Data.

Thus, when allowance is made for this price increase, it is found that fewer units of goods were sold this February than a year ago. Mr. Zelomek gives the decline as 11.7 per cent. Whether one concludes we have had an improvement in retail trade within the past year, accordingly, rests upon the particular kind of statistics that one uses. If he speaks in terms of the general volume of sales the improvement has been large. On the other hand, if he thinks in terms of the actual volume of goods moving, he finds that there has been a shrinkage.

There is, of course, nothing new in such an analysis. Everyone is fully aware that allowance must be made for price changes in appraising fluctuations in the volume of business activity. Too frequently, nevertheless, the desire to show how rapidly we are pulling ourselves out of the depression causes us to forget this elementary statistical correction. The result is that we drive ahead to hasty conclusions, only to find later that we have made a serious error and that our rate of progress has been much less rapid than had been assumed.

Curb's Prices Rally Sharply In Late Trading

New York, March 20 (AP).—The curb market rallied smartly in the last hour today and many of the utility and industrial leaders closed fractions to around a point net higher. Some specialties, however, failed to respond.

Initial quotations were improved but irregularity followed until the late upturn. Trading was dull except for brief flurries, transactions approximating 204,000 shares compared with 286,000 yesterday.

Gulf Oil was heavy to the finish, declining more than 2 points. General Tire & Rubber, Newmont and Pittsburgh Plate Glass ended with moderate recessions.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 85.1 Level

New York, March 20 (AP).—After drifting irregularly lower in the early dealings today, bonds stiffened in the final hour, along with stocks, when it was learned that President Roosevelt had intervened in the threatened automobile strike.

While gains of fractions to around a point were scattered throughout the list at the close, the average for 60 domestic corporate issues finished unchanged at 85.1.

Owing to a substantial expansion of activity in the Federal section, however, transfers totaled $19,720,000, par value, against $14,065,000 yesterday.

Heavy Federal Turnover.

There was a turnover of around $8,200,000 in U. S. Government securities compared with an aggregate of $1,700,000 in the previous session.

All the liberties and the majority of the treasuries showed net declines of 2-32d to 9-32d of a point. The heaviest trading was in Treasury 3½s, which equalled their high of the year with a gain of 4-32d of a point. Two of the 3⅜s were also up slightly.

Dealers attributed the increased volume of Governments largely to profit-taking, the result of a long period of steadily rising prices in this group. There was nothing especially otherwise to account for the declines. It was reported that some of the advances may have been due to Government support.

On Gaining List.

In the corporation categories, gainers included some bonds of Alleghany Corporation, American Rolling Mill, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, Delaware & Hudson, Erie, Goodrich, Goodyear, International Telephone, M-K-T, Nickel Plate, Postal Telegraph, Shell Pile Line and Shell Union Oil, Southern Pacific, Studebaker, Texas Corporation, U. S. Rubber, Vanadium & Western Union.

Among the more active moderate losers were some loans of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, United Drug, Southern Railway, Frisco, Northern Pacific, N. Y. Central, Missouri Pacific, International Paper, Santa Fe and American Water Works.

The foreign division was somewhat dull and mildly mixed. Some of the recently depressed Germans rallied a point or more and the Belgians and Australians were relatively firm.

London—A more cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange today. German bonds recovered early losses, while oil, rubber, and mining shares were uncertain. The market closed steady.

Cotton Turns Upward On Quiet Market

March Closes at 11.98 as General Market Rises 7 to 12 Points.

New York, March 20 (AP).—Cotton was generally higher today in a quiet market. Trade buying checked declines at around previous closing levels, and while rather more reassuring labor news caused rallies in the afternoon, liquidation appeared on the bulges.

July contracts sold up from 12.08 to 12.23 and closed at 12.18, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 7 to 12 points.

Opening advances of 4 to 7 points reflected relatively steady Liverpool cables as well as foreign and domestic trade buying in the near months.

Bar Silver Advances.

An advance in silver and a somewhat easier dollar in foreign exchange attracted scattering support, but moderate rallies met liquidation and Liverpool selling in the December position on wider differences.

During the morning the market backed and filled over a range of about 10 or 12 points. At the lows prices were at or within a few points of the previous closing levels.

During the afternoon prices rallied to new highs for the day and to net gains of 15 to 17 points in sympathy with the firmness of stocks and grains and on Washington reports that the President was attempting to avert labor difficulties.

May sold up from 11.96 to 12.12 and October from 12.23 to 12.38. May liquidation and profit taking caused late reactions of 5 to 8 points from the best.

The report of the Census Bureau on ginnings from the crop of 1933, showing a total of 12,659,953 running bales, or 13,043,110 equivalent 500-pound bales had no market influence.

Exports today, 26,414 bales, making 5,987,366 bales so far this season. Port receipts, 22,238 bales. United States port stocks, 3,197,543 bales.

Cuba Imports Of U.S. Paints Drop Sharply

Reduced purchasing power, together with high customs duties, has markedly curtailed Cuban imports of paints and varnishes, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner R. Horton Henry, Havana.

Cuba, it is pointed out, ranked as the leading foreign market for American paints and varnishes in 1927, when the total value of imports of these products from the United States amounted to $1,793,915. The latest import figures available, covering the first nine months of 1933, show that Cuban receipts of these American items had declined to $227,536, a decline of 17 per cent, as compared with the corresponding period of 1932. The share of the United States in the import trade during the two periods was 59 and 62 per cent, respectively.

The United Kingdom continued to be the leading competitor of the United States for Cuba's paint and varnish import trade, the report states. This is due almost entirely to the fact that for over 25 years a British-made zinc paste paint has found a very large sale among house painters in this country, the majority of whom use it almost exclusively for both interior and exterior work.

Referring to domestic paint production in Cuba during 1...., the report shows that operations at the largest factory were suspended for five months because of legal difficulties. Although the second-largest factory increased its output by about 15 per cent, it is estimated that production of the Cuba paint industry as a whole declined by approximately 40 per cent.

U. S. Dollar Drops On Foreign Marts

(Associated Press.)

The dollar was lower in foreign exchange markets today as foreign currencies worked nearer their new parities in terms of the devalued American unit.

In London the dollar lost seven-eighths of a cent to close at 5.11 to the pound sterling and in New York sterling advanced 1 cent in later trading to $5.11½.

In Paris the dollar was slightly lower at an equivalent of 6.58 cents to the franc, while in New York the French currency advanced .01 of a cent in later dealings to 6.59 cents, 4 points away from its new parity of 6.63 cents.

Gold purchases in the London open market amounted to $3,673,800 at an equivalent of $34.74 a fine ounce.

U. S. Grain Exports Rise During Week

(Associated Press.)

Grain exports from the United States last week totaled 1,171,000 bushels, against 734,000 bushels the previous week and 441,000 bushels for the corresponding week of last year.

Wheat, 970,000 bushels, against 150,000; barley, 160,000, against 167,000; corn, 40,000, against 409,000; oats, 1,000, against 8,000. No exports of rye were reported for either week.

Canadian grain exported last week from north Atlantic ports totaled 549,000 bushels, against 316,000, while exports of North American wheat flour were 60,000 barrels, against 51,000 barrels.

Wheat Renews Climb Under Late Buying

Prospects of Settling Auto Labor Troubles Aid Price Recovery.

Chicago, March 20 (AP).—Lively upturns of prices in the last few minutes of trading today more than offset earlier wavering of the grain markets.

End-of-the-day buying which brought about higher prices for wheat was associated both with increased likelihood of a settlement of automotive labor troubles and with satisfaction expressed by market trade leaders regarding President Roosevelt's approval of the new National code for grain exchange dealings.

Leading unofficial authorities in the grain trade said the code provision as to margin requirements would assure safety and stability of the market price structure. It was declared to be sound policy that individuals interested in excessive lines of grain should put up margins in proportion.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat closed firm at the day's top level, ¼ to ¾ above yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to ⅜ higher; oats, ⅛ to ⅜ up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17 cents.

No definite opinions on the market effects of the new code for grain exchanges were obtainable until the final quarter-hour of business.

The reason was that previously the details of the code as given final official approval were not known by the majority of traders. It was about this juncture also that word was received telling of President Roosevelt's personal intervention in the automotive strike situation.

Switch Made to Buying.

Confronted by two major encouraging market factors as the day approached a finish, grain traders made haste to switch to the purchase side, especially in the wheat pit.

Sagging of prices was quickly reversed, temporary declines having been due in considerable degree to dearth of buying rather than to any unusual pressure to sell.

Helping the late rally in grains was buoyancy of securities and cotton. It was not until after grain trading was ended that developments were heard of pointing to likelihood of a settlement of railroad wage troubles as well as those of the automotive industry.

London Apple Prices Rise During Week

America May Be Main Source of Supply Until End of Season.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 20 (Spl.).—Auction prices at London this week on apples were a little stronger than last, but ruling prices at Liverpool were somewhat weaker, according to a cable from Fred A. Motz, Fruit Specialist in Europe gor the Foreign Srevice of the Department of Agriculture.

Inquiry was active at the sales for the moderate supplies of friut. Except for the usual amount of decay expected at this season, the fruit was in good condition.

Prices Little Changed.

At London barrel prices were little changed to stronger. Oregon Newtowns were somewhat higher and Washington Winesaps somewhat lower. Prices between Liverpool and London varied considerably. London was about 25 cents to 51 cents higher on barrels on an average than Liverpool.

On the other hand, Liverpool returns ranged 7 cents to 19 cents higher than London on boxed fruit.

Supplies of Canadian apples on the British markets were still a little heavier than those of United States origin. The tide seems to have turned at last, and it appears probable that from now on the United States will be the main source of supply until the end of the season.

Virginia Albemarle Pippins.

U. S. No. 1 2¼ Virginia Albemarle Pippins sold at around $7.39 this week, compared with $4.39 last year at this time and $5.62 at the corresponding sale in 1932. The same comparisons for Virginia Ben Davis are: 1934, $5.48; 1933, $4.33, and in 1932, $4.28 per barrel. Washington Winesaps, extra fancy 150-175 made around $2.55 this week, against $1.90 at this time last year and $1.68 in 1932.

It will be noted that in all cases the dollar returns are substantially higher this season than in the previous two years. However, in some cases there was a considerably higher sterling price in the last two seasons than in the present one.

The Scottish markets appreciate the Delicious variety probably better than any other European outlet. Furthermore, the Scotch seem to be willing to pay premium prices for quality stock. This week Delicious apples from Oregon, Washington and British Columbia were sold there.

Oregon Outsells Others.

Oregon stock was of extra fancy grade and easily outsold the other two origins which were fancy grade. Prices on the Oregon Delicious ranged from $3.06 to $3.70 per box. This means about $1.35 to $2.00 a box to the American shipper. Preference in Scotland is for somewhat larger sizes than that which makes the best prices in the south of England.

Apples are arriving in England in somewhat heavier amounts than at this time in the last two years. Imports this week totaled 401,000 bushels against 271,000 last year at this time and 233,000 in the previous year (1932).

Last week loads amounted to 329,000 bushels. There is expected about 391,000 bushels for the coming seven days.

Apples in Brisk Demand.

Winchester, Va., March 20 (Spl.). A brisk demand for American apples during the entire winter has resulted in the cold storage stocks at the present time being the smallest in years, brokers and exporters reported here today.

Brokers stated that apples in general are from 15 to 40 cents per basket higher now than two months ago and that indications were that the cold storage stocks would be moved by April 1. The brokers also pointed out that apples have been in such steady demand in American markets and prices have been so satisfactory during the season just closed as the total for last season, the totals being 100,003,288 for 1933-'34, as compared with 62,353,303 the previous year, according to a report released today by the Austin Co. of Greensville, Tenn. The average for this year was $10.37 per hundred, compared to $13.78 last year.

Greenville, Knoxville, Morristown, Johnson City and Abingdon, Va., were the largest markets in the district, and all showed gains in volume. Figures for these markets were as follows:

Divorced Wife Seeking Estate Of Capt. Evans

Mexican Decree Involved in Probating Will of Admiral's Son.

Two Mexican divorces and the $200 estate left by Capt. Franck Taylor Evans, U. S. N., son of the late Admiral Robley D. Evans, formed the basis of a petition for probate of Capt. Evans' will filed here yesterday.

The first Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Gertrude Pullman Evans, filed the petition. She said she permitted Capt. Evans to obtain a Mexican divorce in 1927 because of his threat to leave her without funds.

After the divorce Capt. Evans married Enid Scarritt Middleton, of New York City, who also had obtained a Mexican divorce. Mrs. Gertrude Evans challenegd the validity of her husband's divorce and remarriage. She added that the second wife "claiming to be his widow" is the only other person interested in the $200 estate, the nature of which was not revealed.

The petition recited that the Evans couple was married in Norfolk in 1901, and lived together until Capt. Evans deserted his wife in 1926. Mrs. Evans said she did not protest the divorce at the time "because of Capt. Evans' brilliant record in the Navy, and the even more distinguished service of his father, the late Admiral Robley D. Evans, I was unwilling to take any step or prefer any charges which might tarnish this record."

Women Renew Fight on Long

Louisiana Group Scores Senate Dropping of Ouster Charges.

New Orleans, March 20 (U.P.).—Resumption of the fight to oust United States Senator Huey P. Long was announced today by Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, militant leader of the Louisiana women's committee.

Mrs. Hammond, expressing indignation over the Senate Judiciary Committee report which held that petitions seeking Long's ouster were "defamatory and scurrilous," declared this action cleans the way for hearing of charges filed by her organization with the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee.

Meanwhile Senator Long asserted his political usefulness would end if his enemies stop picking on him. "I'm not interested, said Long, when informed of the report. "There have been charges against me ever since I entered public life."

Who Was Assaulted? Pair Want Jury to Rule

When Robert M. Tyson and Roy S. Cloud, both colored, appear in jury branch of Police Court next week, they will act alternately as defendants and complainants in the same case.

They were arraigned on assault charges before Judge Isaac Hitt yesterday. Both complained they were assaulted by the other. They pleaded not guilty and demanded jury trials.

D. C. Woman's Death By Auto Ruled Accident

A verdict of "accidental death" was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday following an inquest into the death of Mrs. Mary Bladen, 60, killed Sunday night when struck by an automobile near Georgia avenue and Ingraham street northwest.

Olson Denies Schall's CWA Graft Charges

St. Paul, March 20 (A.P.).—Gov. Floyd B. Olson today characterized as "maliciously false" statements by Senator Thomas D. Schall, of Minnesota, that CWA workers in this State are required to join the Farmer-Labor party and pay $2 for jobs.

Gov. Olson sent a telegram replying to Schall to Senator Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Labor member, asking him to insert it in the Senate record.

Radio Waves and Ripples

TAKE heart, radio listeners, take heart in Dr. Nevil Monroe Hopkins, lecturer in engineering at New York University and former Washingtonian. No longer need you suffer, inarticulate and forebearing at the hands of our radio program makers. For Dr. Hopkins, who once served as a member of the George Washington University faculty and as an electrical engineer in the Navy Department, has made going on record for or against radio entertainment as simple and annonymous as pushing a button.

In fact, that's all Dr. Hopkins' device requires you to do—push buttons, one to vote "yes," another to vote "no," and a third for straddlers who wish merely to answer the roll call by voting "present." Dr. Hopkins is making his machines about the size of a cigar box to be attached to any home receiver at the cost of $1. Another contrivance for counting and tabulating your votes, also Dr. Hopkins' invention, is designed for studio installation.

ACCORDING to Dr. Hopkins, his invention has been perfected in a series of secret tests, participated in by commercial and governmental scientists and its practical utilization is now being considered by a large electrical corporation. It works through some mysterious utilization of electrical energy in the form of the infra-red ray and the wired of carrier-current phases of broadcast radio. Anyone asking for an understandable explanation will be referred to Dr. Hopkins.

Dr. Hopkins yesterday was considering an invitation from WJSV Manager Harry Butcher to give his invention its first demonstration in conjunction with a commercial broadcast in Washington. How broadcasters received news of the voting machine may be judged from the Butcher telegram to Dr. Hopkins, which said, in part:

"Your device if practical, would fill a long-felt want of broadcasting stations, sponsors and talent, all of which are anxious to know promptly whether audience likes or dislikes specific programs."

Dr. Hopkins, however, is not the sort of man to stop at making radio listeners articulate. An additional phase of his invention would convert every lamp socket virtually into a voting station. We expect the Literary Digest people to be very happy about this.

This, ladies and gentlemen, is Andre Kostelanetz in his best maestro manner. He brings a band to Columbia airwaves tonight, and next month takes over the baton work on a program that is to have as its principals none other than Rosa Ponselle, Nino Martini and Grete Stueckgold.

FIGHTING between the networks here has spread to a new sector.

There was a time when an auction in Alexandria, a beer bill hearing, a starling war at the Capital or any little thing like that was certain to produce an exclusive WJSV broadcast. But no more. Slowly, but unmistakable, National's WRC and WMAL have begun an invasion.

Against N. B. C.'s latest sally—a scheme for laying lines out Calvert street way where they're getting ready to move a bridge—Columbia has begun a counter attack.

Tomorrow night it will send Announcer Robert Trout up to the United States Information Service for a first-hand account of how the people up there manager to keep straight the HOLC's, the TVA's and the AC 'A's long enough to tell other people what they are and where to find them. And Saturday it will reach once more for our heart strings by letting youngsters who got dogs from the pound last Christmas tell how they and the dogs are getting along, and Pound Master Walter R. Smith—who isn't a bad sort, really—give a few pointers on caring for dogs.

But that's not all. If National means to go ahead with the bridge-moving broadcast, Columbia's prepared to do a broadcast of the Washington Monument swaying, figuring that should be as good as an itinerant bridge any day.

WHAT is a wheat pit? What is a "long?" And what are "shorts" besides something you wear?

You'll have a chance to find out next month when Columbia for the first time runs radio lines onto the trading floor of the Chicago Board of Trade for a description of operations in the wheat pit as a climactic touch to a program that will attempt an exposition of grain marketing from wheat field to consumer.

The broadcast will include an air picture of Chicago's huge grain yards, its gigantic elevators that are reservoirs for the Nation's food supply, and justification of the board's existence and its place in the economic structure by President Peter B. Carey.

It's all a part of the board's program for making itself understood as something else than an organization devoted to legalized robbery.

Slam Bidding.

A correspondent remarked in a recent letter that almost any dub without a license can keep the car out of the gutter up to four—in other words, that so widespread is the knowledge of the correct principles of bidding that generally even dub Contract players can be trusted to bid their sure games. He added that the Four-Five No-trump Convention provides a paved and lighted road to Slams, and even a dub need not err in reaching the correct Slam contract or in stopping short of a Grand Slam when only a Small Slam can be made.

In spite of the comparative simplicity of modern Slam bidding, on the following hand, played in a recent Duplicate game, only two of the ten pairs reached the unbeatable Grand Slam through the use of this convention. One of the pairs to achieve this result was composed of Mrs. George U. Harris and Mrs. Lewis Osborn. Mrs. Osborn held the North hand and Mrs. Harris the South hand.

1—North's previous Jump Takeout makes this a Forcing bid, disclosing the possession of two Aces and the King of a bid suit. The bid, of course, is fully justified in view of the tremendous strength of the spade suit, even without any fit with partner's bid suit.

2—The conventional response. Of course, South has no knowledge of the strength of North's spade suit, but the response is forced.

3—With a partner strong enough to open the bidding and rebid his suit, and with the assurance of first round control, regardless of the lead, the bid for the Grand Slam is clearly indicated.

In the play a diamond was opened, and the cotnract was made without trouble.

Walt Mason, Himself

The New Order.

The old time undertaker, the agent of the tomb, he was no sunshine maker, but he was wrapped in gloom. In sable garments treading, he talked of dismal things, profound affliction shedding from out his condor wings. His hat and sleeves were studded with bands and wreaths of rape, his mournful eyes were flooded with tears of every shape. When finally and lastly he was called in to serve, he made his function ghastly, with woe in every curve. He always had a skin full of misery on file, and thought it bad and sinful to heave a pleasant smile. His name is but a relic that only graybeards know; he joined the hosts angelic a long, long time ago. The modern brisk mortician has come to take his place, to hold his grim position, but with a cheerful face. He imitates no raven by wearing black attire; his map is cleanly shaven, he is the town's live wire. He smiles upon the baker, the clerk and engineer, whereas the undertaker would only spring a tear. And thus our system changes, wherever we may gaze, whene'er attention ranges from old to modern days.

Bremers Here, Agree to Help In Kidnap Hunt

Father and Uncle Pledge Cooperation; Victim Still Silent.

Complete cooperation with the Department of Justice in tracking down the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, of St. Paul, yesterday was promised by Adolph and Otto Bremer, father and uncle of the victim, who was abducted January 17 and released February 7, upon payment of $200,000.

The Bremers came to Washington and acted apparently because of recent criticism aimed at some members of the family by Attorney General Cummings. Edward remained in St. Paul. Shortly after visiting the Department of Justice, Adolph left for his home, while Otto remained at the Hamilton Hotel.

"We came also to thank the Department of Justice for its wonderful work in the case," asserted Otto Bremer yesterday. "We have complete confidence in the ability of the Department to solve this case. Adolph and I came here to assure Mr. Cummings and other officials of our cooperation."

Attorney General Cummings, at a recent press conference, said he was "disappointed" at the lack of cooperation received by Federal investigators from the Bremer family.

The department's criticism, it was indicated later, was directed chiefly at Edward Bremer for his reluctance to discuss details of his kidnaping. The elder Bremer cooperated "100 per cent" from the outset of the crime, it was said.

The Bremers did not visit the White House, although President Roosevelt is a friend of the Bremer family. They said they felt the President was too busy to see them.

Old Members Feted By Board of Trade

Harry C. Grove was the oldest member honored. The chairmen dating back to 1912 were Chris Goeckler, H. Clifford Bangs, Edward F. Colladay, Charles F. Crane, George P. Farquhar, George Plitt, Fred J. Hite, George Miller, William W. Ross, John Saul, Luther W. Linkins, William R. Ellis, Jerome F. Barnard, Milton Schwab and Elmore T. Burdette.

Tributes to the chairmen and veteran members were paid by E. C. Graham, Mr. Colladay and Claude W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade. Songs were rendered by Miss Erna Embrey, with Miss Jewel Downs, accompanying.

Lakes-Gulf Waterway To Be Opened Friday

Chicago, March 20 (AP).—The Lakes to Gulf Waterway, connecting Chicago and New Orleans, will be open to navigation Friday.

The northern stretch of the waterway, between Peoria and Chicago will be opened that day. The Southern link has been open since March 1. However, a bridge at Morris, Ill., will prevent large tows from using the waterway. A new bridge is being constructed.

Mental Conflict Aids Life, Says Dr. White

"Conflict is the essence of life," Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, told the Washington Civitan Club yesterday. Dr. White pointed out that the conflict ever in progress between the mind and the complex burdens of existence is the mainspring of life.

The projection of an ideal and the effort to reach the unattainable, the noted psychiatrist said, prevents the slump which spells mental death.

Trio Arrested In Kidnaping

Telephone "Tips" Capture Suspects in Kelley Seizure.

St. Louis, March 20 (AP).—Anonymous telephone calls today landed three of the six alleged kidnapers of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, abducted in 1931, in the St. Louis County Jail shortly before their scheduled appearances in court.

They were Angelo Rosegrant, Bart Davit and John C. Johnson, indicted with three others last week. The prosecutors' office announced applications for bond would be resisted.

Rosegrant and Bart Davit were arrested in St. Louis suburbs. Officers said they believed the telephone "tips" had been arranged by the suspects, who did not want to surrender voluntarily.

Johnson, colored, operator of the farm where the St. Louis physician was held during ransom negotiations, was arrested by deputy sheriffs.

Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, wife of Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, of St. Louis, and accused as the "brains" of the abduction plot, surrendered last week and was released on $50,000 bond.

The latest notes concerned the girl, Mary Paullin, daughter of Howard Paullin, a drug store manager. Signed "X X X," it read:

"We have been watching and following you and your daughter and when we catch her alone you will never see her alive again. If you warn the police we will burn your house. Remember, we will get you. You can't double cross us and get away with it."

The child has been under guard since the letter was received.

London, March 20 (AP).—Back to the land as the best method of dealing with unemployment was advocated tonight by David Lloyd George, war-time prime minister.

The retired statesman declared that if unemployment dwindled at the present rate the figure might be reduced to about 1,000,000 in 1936.

Hundreds of millions of pounds lying idle in banks could be invested in development of those resources, Mr. Lloyd George said.

Estate Tax Raised; Stock Levy Voted In Committee

Senators Boost Expected Revenue in Bill to 300 Millions.

Would Take Half Of Great Fortunes

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Voting to increase the Federal inheritance tax on large estates and to levy a capital stock tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent on all corporations, the Senate Finance Committee, approving the pending tax bill late yesterday, boosted to $300,000,000 the estimated additional revenue of the measure.

As the bill passed the House, it was estimated it would provide $258,000,000 additional revenue, including $87,000,000 anticipated from changes in Treasury administration of the depreciation and depletion allowances in existing law. The Senate estimate of $300,000,000 includes also that figure, although the bill itself does not deal with the depreciation and depletion aspect.

The change in inheritance tax was an increase by 1 per cent in each of the last five brackets applying to large estates. This would increase the inheritance tax from 45 to 50 per cent on estates over $10,000,000. Senator Robert M. La Follette (Republican), of Wisconsin, was defeated in his effort to make the tax 60 per cent on estates above $10,000,000.

Effective in 1935.

In restoring the capital stock tax the committee failed to carry out the entire proposal of its chairman, Senator Pat Harrison, Mississippi, when it was discovered that revenue from this tax would not be available until July 1, 1935, the first day of the 1936 fiscal year.

Senator Harrison proposed reenactment of the capital stock tax, estimated to yield $95,000,000 annually, as a substitute for nuisance taxes, yielding a like amount. These included the Federal tax on theater admissions, toilet articles, furs, candy and chewing gum, soft drinks and other "luxuries."

Experts of the Finance Committee pointed out that the capital stock tax was payable on July 1 for the preceding 12 months. They also

Fugitive Believed Delayed by Storms; May Have Changed Course.

Port Said, Egypt, March 21 (AP).—Port authorities redoubled their lookouts tonight for Samuel Insull's cruising haven in the belief that unless he has changed his plans the former financier will reach the Suez Canal before long.

The tardiness of the Maiotis led to the general opinion that the fugitive has no intention of putting in here, but officials remained vigilant.

The craft, which took Insull from hostile Greece Sunday and headed this way, was listed as overdue at Port Said, but it was pointed out that her slowness could be explained by storms or another cause beyond the control of the 74-year-old fugitive.

Senate Closes Loopholes.

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill designed to prevent Samuel Insull from avoiding extradition to the United States by authorizing removal to this country of American fugitives from places where this country exercises extraterritorial rights, according to the Associated Press.

Under such rights, the United States can try its nationals in those countries according to American law.

The measure was reported from the Foreign Relations Committee by Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, and passed without objection.

1,000 Perish In Japanese Conflagration

Port City of Hakodate Is Reported Razed by Flames.

Tokyo (Thursday), March 22 (AP). One thousand persons are feared to have died in a fire which was reported today to have destroyed most of Hakodate, a port city of 200,000 population.

The blaze was said to have started when chimneys were toppled by a severe windstorm last night. Throughout the night the conflagration raged and spread to nearby suburbs.

A Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatch said 80 per cent of the city—the principal port on Hakaido Island—was reduced to ruins.

All important public buildings were reported destroyed. Communication lines were broken and news of the catastrophe reached the outside world only by wireless messages from nearby vessels.

It was estimated that more than 100,000 were made homeless.

Electric plants were destroyed soon after the fire broke out and the city was thrown into darkness except for the lurid light of the flames.

One dispatch said that the city was a "living hell" and that "through the darkness the refugees were fleeing from death and were abandoning even the small bundles of possessions they carried from their homes."

House Vote On Full Pay Slated Today

Favorable Ballot on Act Expected to Force Roosevelt Veto.

High Cost Would Give President Cause to Kill Measure.

House concurrence in Senate amendments to the independent offices bill restoring full pay to government employes and $118,000,000 in benefits to World and Spanish-American War veterans was predicted yesterday by proponents after conferees had failed to agree on the two controversial amendments.

The amendments will be voted on this afternoon for the fourth time in a fortnight when Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the House conferees, reports the result of the conference and moves that the House further insist on its amendments.

A record vote will be demanded after Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, again offers a preferential motion that the House concur in the Senate amendments so that the bill may be sent immediately to the White House.

Goss Predicts Reversal.

"From information I have gathered talking with members on both sides of the House I believe that the House will reverse its former stand and move to concur in the amendments," Representative Goss (Republican), Connecticut, one of the conferees, stated.

"Even the Administration leaders appear to be anxious to send the bill to the White House loaded with enough amendments to give the President a good excuse for vetoing it."

Representative Connery also predicted that the House would adopt his motion.

Administration leaders reiterated their confidence that Mr. Roosevelt will veto the bill if the Senate amendments are approved and expressed the view that it probably would meet the same fate even if the House amendments were accepted by the Senate.

The conferees yesterday reached a speedy agreement on all other amendments which had been added by the Senate and made only one minor amendment.

One amendment agreed to benefits to Government employes by restoring automatic and administration promotions with certain limitations.

Promotions Restored.

All automatic promotion privileges, which were held up in the economy act, would be restored except the longevity increases, which provide for increases of 5 per cent above the base pay for each three years of service. The Administration promotions would be restored only "to the extent that funds are available."

Veteran Abandons Bonus March Plan

CCC Worker Heeds Wire From Patman.

Barre, Vt., March 21 (AP).—The latest proposal for a "bonus march" on Washington was abandoned today by George A. Koryski, a World War veteran from Baltimore, now stationed at a CCC camp here, upon the advice of Representative Wright Patman, of Texas.

Patman sent Koryski a wire saying in part: "My opinion is such a march will be very detrimental to the veterans' cause. I think it would be a grievous mistake for which all veterans would eventually pay in one way or another."

Tension Eased By Tokyo-U. S. Peace Pledges

By Kendall Foss.

In an exchange of personal letters between Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Japan and the United States yesterday took one cautious step toward breaking down the tension which has marred relations since the fall of Mukden on September 18, 1931.

Hirota sent a personal message to Hull through Ambassador Saito on February 21. Hull presented Saito with a reply on March 3. The exchange was published yesterday. Obviously both parties used great care in the preparation of their letters.

Extending his hand in a considered gesture, Hirota said:

"I can state with all emphasis at my command that the Japanese nation makes it its basic principle to collaborate in peace and harmony with all nations and has no intention whatever to provoke and make trouble with any other power.

Peace Is Goal, He Says.

"It is the sincere desire of Japan that a most peaceful and friendly relation will be firmly established between her and her great neighbor across the Pacific, the United States."

Grasping the proffered hand, Hull replied:

"I receive this statement with special gratification and I am glad to take this opportunity to state categorically that the United States on its part has no desire to create

1,750 D. C. Car Men Get Raise

Pay increases of 4 cents an hour for 1,750 trainmen and bus drivers were granted yesterday by the Capital Transit Co., effective April 1.

Union negotiators said the agreement meant employers agreed living costs had gone up here and wages had been driven too low. Popularity of the street car passes also aided.

The blanket raise will increase the pay roll several thousand dollars a week. There will be no changes in working hours of 54 per week under the transportation code.

Most motormen and conductors receive 45, 49 or 51 cents an hour, the maximum for one year's seniority. All 250 bus operators and one-man-car operators receive 5 cents additional.

J. H. Cookman, union secretary, interpreted the boost as amounting to a 10 per cent increase. He said negotiations would continue in an effort to extend the raise to some 650 shop and other workers. The settlement will operate for one year.

In financial quarters it was considered significant that the Capital Transit Co. could raise wages in less than a year after taking over the city's street railway lines under a merger plan.

Union negotiators in addition to Cookman included M. W. Poole, Victor Rogers, W. F. Simms and J. L. O'Brien. The corporation was represented by John H. Hanna, president.

Dairy Slash To Hike Milk, Butter Price

Regional Meetings Will Submit Proposal to Dairy Industry.

A plan to increase dairy farmers' incomes by payment of benefits for a 15 per cent production cut financed through processing taxes was announced yesterday by Chester C. Davis, farm administrator.

This plan, comparable to crop reduction programs already adopted, is subject to the dairy industry's approval. It will be submitted to milk producers at regional meetings in the next two weeks.

The processing tax, Mr. Davis said, will be half a cent a quart for fluid milk and in some cases will be absorbed by the distributor and in others paid by the consumer. On butter the tax will be 5 cents a pound, probably all to be met by the consumer in increased prices.

Two other salient features of the plan tie in with relief programs. In one, $5,000,000 will go to the distribution of surplus milk to underfed city children. In the other, it is planned to send surplus cows to nondairy regions, notably the South, where impoverished farmers can use them for subsistence milk.

Cost Believed 165 Million.

Davis estimated that the program would cost $165,000,000, but added that its scope could be increased to $300,000,000 depending on the adoption of legislation pending in Congress.

Farmers would be paid benefits at the rate of about 40 cents for each pound of butter fat which they reduced below the 1932-1933 production. This is equivalent to about $1.50 per hundred pounds of fluid milk. The 15 per cent reduction is figured from the 1932-1933 level.

And other provision was the use of a $5,000,000 fund for the eradication of tubercular and Bang-diseased cattle.

Davis believes that the farmers will be benefited more than just through the compensatory amount for reduction of production. He said that they also would have reduced feeding costs and higher prices due to balanced production.

The farmer can take several choices of decreasing production, Davis said. Two of these would be either by culling his herd or curtailing feeding. The plan leaves $225,000 to advise producers on the best-paying methods.

Consumption to Drop.

Asked if the operation of the plan would not decrease milk consumption, because of higher prices Davis replied that it might to a certain extent. This he said would be of dairy products rather than fluid milk, adding that relief distribution would probably balance decreased paid consumption.

Davis outlined the purpose of the plan as: "To avert a reverse back to lower prices, to improve the buying power of dairy farmers, eliminate extreme fluctuations in production

Former Wife Sues Her Rival for Wells

Bridegport, Conn., March 21 (AP).—An action seeking $50,000 for loss of the affections of Grant Carveth Wells, of Weston, noted explorer, author and lecturer, was filed in Superior Court today by Wells' former wife, Luard T. Wells, of New York City, against Zetta Robart Wells, the explorer's second wife.

The action alleges that the present Mrs. Wells, through her position as lecturer and publicity manager for her husband, alienated his affections and was guilty of misconduct with him.

Hagerstown Hen Has Something It Can Crow About

Hagerstown, Md., March 21 (AP).—With a razor blade and a button hook, Mrs. Ida Manley recently performed an emergency operation on her ailing red hen and probably saved its life.

The Hagerstown housewife had petted the hen for five years. When it became ill and would not eat she decided something drastic had to be done.

Having read that most chickens' troubles resulted from their craws she conducted an examination.

With scarcely a flutter, the hen lay on its back while Mrs. Manley opened its craw with the razor blade and used the button hook for probing. In a few seconds she pulled out a rubber band which had prevented the chicken from swallowing.

Then with needle and thread she sewed up the incision, and now the hen is quite well again.

Redraft Monopolistic Codes, Borah Demands

Idahoan Says Economic Feudalism Looms Under NRA.

As Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, yesterday assailed the NRA for promoting "monopolistic prices and control" in industry, NRA attaches turned their attention to a study of methods of revising the steel code to make its price provisions more satisfactory to the White House.

Senator Borah's speech was inspired by the report of the Federal Trade Commission made Tuesday to the Senate in which it was contended that the steel code permitted monopolies to control prices.

President Roosevelt is understood to be sympathetic with the findings of the trade commission and regards as highly unsatisfactory those provisions of the steel code relating to the fixing of prices. He has taken the stand that some method for dealing with prices must be worked out other than that in the code.

Meanwhile, Kenneth M. Simpson, NRA division administrator, is scheduled to confer with the steel code authority to discuss the trade

Ogden Davis, D. C. Police Official, Dies

Inspector Had Been With Washington Force for 33 Years.

Inspector Ogden T. Davis, for 33 year associated with the Washington police force, died last night at George Washington Hospital from bronchial pneumonia and influenza.

Davis, who was 54 years old, was taken ill a month ago and his condition became so serious ten days ago that he was taken from his home, at 1408 Crittenden street northwest, to George Washington Hospital. There he was placed under an oxygen tent, and a blood transfusion was attempted without success.

At the time of his death he was in charge of the Third Police Inspection District, a position he had held since his removal as head of the Crime Prevention Bureau, on September 30, 1932, when Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent, became dissatisfied with the manner in which the bureau functioned in reference to the bonus marchers here.

He joined the police force on August 2, 1901, and was attached to the Ninth Precinct. On June 20, 1902, he was commended for saving two lives in a runaway accident. He was transferred to the Eighth Precinct and made acting sergeant on July 1, 1911. At the same time, he was commended for the arrest of

Mills Asserts Trade Suffers Off Gold Base

New York, March 21 (AP).—Ogden Mills called for a prompt return to an international gold standard tonight, a few hours after Prof. G. F. Warren, of Cornell University, urged that the United States "do better" than restore the "old type" monetary system.

The former Secretary of the Treasury and the adviser to the Roosevelt Administration addressed meetings of the Academy of Political Science.

Mills criticized industrial control plans, saying "we shall never solve the paradox of want by doing away with the plenty. I am prepared to cast my lot with economic freedom as contrasted with the rigidity of a controlled and regimented economy."

Asserts Trade Suffering.

"Why a gold standard? As far as I am concerned, first, because I know of no syste likely to function better.

"Secondly, because it is difficult enough to reach any agreement

King George, Va., March 21 (AP). Robbers who broke into the Bank of King George early today escaped with $500, but tear gas foiled their attempt to loot the vault which contained some $10,000.

It was the second time within two years that the tear gas has saved the vault.

Farm Labor Shortage Laid To Free Hand of U. S. Relief

Welfare relief rolls and CWA jobs have caused a shortage of farm help in Prince Georges County, it was charged yesterday.

Joseph H. Blanford, president of the County Taxpayers Association, speaking before the Board of Commissioners, declared large numbers of people were refusing to work because of Government aid. He said:

"False impressions of relief work have been acquired during the last several months. Numbers of people are on the rolls who have other jobs.

"There also are many on the CWA projects who, while credited as being from Prince Georges County, are outsiders. Many persons, too, have been getting $3.50 a day as skilled laborers when actually they know nothing of the work."

Others in the gathering of approximately 100 persons who spoke against adding taxes for unemployment relief, decried the "deplorable" condition which they said existed in the country.

Many gave instances of farm helpers who refused to work and quoted them as saying "why should we work when the Government will take care of us?"

Blanford recommended that welfare projects be slackened during the summer months. Normal interests will take up the slack, he declared.

The meeting of the commissoners was called for the purpose of listening to a proposal from Harry Greenstein, Federal relief administrator, regarding the levying of an 8-cent unemployment tax.

Greenstein told the county executives it was imperative that the tax, made permissable by pasage of a bill through the recent legislature, must be levied at once. There is less than $200,000 left of State funds, he said.

"This tax must be levied for your own protection," he declared. "I don't know what might happen if something isn't done."

Arch Mandel, field representative for the Federal Relief Administration, and Miss Charlotte Wilcox, country relief administrator, also spoke in behalf of the cause. Members of the county welfare board were present.

Roosevelt Confers With Motor Heads, Hears Labor Today.

Eastman Accepted As Carrier Arbiter

Textile Workers and Longshoremen Join Dispute List.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt yesterday began his campaign to prevent a strike in the automobile industry, impending because of refusal of manufacturers to recognize labor unions.

For more than two hours, the President heard the case of the manufacturers, presented to him personally by the heads of nearly all the leading automobile concerns in the country. This afternoon he will hear the case of the workers.

Meanwhile, at the suggestion of the President, railroad managers and railroad unions agreed to submit their wage dispute to Joseph B. Eastman, Federal railroad coordinator, for mediation. At the same time, however, both sides indicated that they are as far apart as ever. Eastman plans to open negotiations with the opposing factions today.

While efforts were being made to settle these two controversies, strike threats in other industries continued to be reported.

Other Strike Threats.

Francis J. Gorman, of Providence, R. I., vice president of the United Textile Workers, told the Senate Labor Committee that agitation for a strike of 200,000 union textile workers is increasing.

From the Pacific Coast came an appeal to President Roosevelt to intercede in the impending strike of longshoremen, threatening to tie up industry in that region.

President Roosevelt indicated before the session with the automobile makers that he had no definite plan to propose immediately, that he first intended to hear both sides of the controversy. Immediately after the conference, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings hurried to the White House and conferred with the President more than an hour.

The entire situation was surrounded by studied secrecy. The only inkling of what was going on came from Cummings when he told a reporter who asked him whether he and the President were talking

Balzar, Nevada Governor, Dead

Executive, Ill for Months, Was Near End of Second Term.

Carson City, Nev., March 21 (AP). Gov. Fred Bennett Balzar died this afternoon at the Governor's mansion here. The Governor, a Republican, had been ill several months.

Gov. Balzar was nearing the end of his second term as chief executive of Nevada, a position he won in the election of 1927 by defeating James G. Scrugham, the Democratic incumbent.

He was 53 years old, a native of Virginia City, Nev. A mining man most of his life, Balzar had been active in efforts toward remonetization of silver.

He served as a member of the State House of Representatives in 1905 and as a member of the Senate from 1907 to 1917.

Andes Mountains Spanned on Hop By Laura Ingalls

Buenos Aires, March 21 (AP).—Miss Laura Ingalls, New York aviatrix, today achieved her ambition to become the first American woman flier to span the lofty Andes alone.

She arrived here this afternoon from Santiago, Chile, after a flight across the mountain ranges which previously had been made by two women solo, the French aviatrix Voland and the German flier Bienhold.

Miss Ingalls left New York February 28 on the flight by stages to Buenos Aires. Uneasiness for her was felt only once and that was while she was still in the United States.

She dropped from sight March 2 between Charleston, S. C., and Miami, but turned up safely in Miami the next day, offering only the explanation that "I just had to dip off some place" to use a "six-shooter" a friend in New York had given her.

Virginia May Delay Opening State Liquor Stores 60 Days

Norfolk, Va., March 21 (Spl.). Although the sale of whisky in Virginia becomes legal tomorrow, Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the alcoholic beverages control board, today said it may be 60 days before the State begins retailing liquor in State-controlled stores.

Under the law, however, a person can bring in from another State as much as 1 gallon at any time. Anticipating activities by bootleggers with the advent of legal whisky in Virginia, the Federal Government today sent two additional men to Norfolk to join the internal revenue forces. The new arrivals were Charles Flynn and J. R. Moore.

Tyler said it would be mere guesswork to attempt to fix a time when State dispensaries would open. Tyler goes to Richmond tonight and expects to spend most of his time for the next few months in the capital. The other members of the board, T. McCall Frazier and R. McC. Bullington, are in Richmond today.

"We will take the oath tomorrow in Richmond, organize at noon, select our office headquarters and start developing the system as rapidly as possible," the chairman said.

Licenses to hotels and restaurants for the sale of wines and beers will be granted by the board on April 2.

Bremers Here, Agree to Help In Kidnap Hunt

Father and Uncle Pledge Cooperation; Victim Still Silent.

Complete cooperation with the Department of Justice in tracking down the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, of St. Paul, yesterday was promised by Adolph and Otto Bremer, father and uncle of the victim, who was abducted January 17 and released February 7, upon payment of $200,000.

The Bremers came to Washington and acted apparently because of recent criticism aimed at some members of the family by Attorney General Cummings. Edward remained in St. Paul. Shortly after visiting the Department of Justice, Adolph left for his home, while Otto remained at the Hamilton Hotel.

"We came also to thank the Department of Justice for its wonderful work in the case," asserted Otto Bremer yesterday. "We have complete confidence in the ability of the Department to solve this case. Adolph and I came here to assure Mr. Cummings and other officials of our cooperation."

Attorney General Cummings, at a recent press conference, said he was "disappointed" at the lack of cooperation received by Federal investigators from the Bremer family.

The department's criticism, it was indicated later, was directed chiefly at Edward Bremer for his reluctance to discuss details of his kidnaping. The elder Bremer cooperated "100 per cent" from the outset of the crime, it was said.

The Bremers did not visit the White House, although President Roosevelt is a friend of the Bremer family. They said they felt the President was too busy to see them.

Trio Arrested In Kidnaping

Telephone "Tips" Capture Suspects in Kelley Seizure.

St. Louis, March 20 (AP).—Anonymous telephone calls today landed three of the six alleged kidnapers of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, abducted in 1931, in the St. Louis County Jail shortly before their scheduled appearances in court.

They were Angelo Rosegrant, Bart Davit and John C. Johnson, indicted with three others last week. The prosecutors' office announced applications for bond would be resisted.

Rosegrant and Bart Davit were arrested in St. Louis suburbs. Officers said they believed the telephone "tips" had been arranged by the suspects, who did not want to surrender voluntarily.

Johnson, colored, operator of the farm where the St. Louis physician was held during ransom negotiations, was arrested by deputy sheriffs.

Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, wife of Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, of St. Louis, and accused as the "brains" of the abduction plot, surrendered last week and was released on $50,000 bond.

The latest notes concerned the girl, Mary Paullin, daughter of Howard Paullin, a drug store manager. Signed "X X X," it read:

"We have been watching and following you and your daughter and when we catch her alone you will never see her alive again. If you warn the police we will burn your house. Remember, we will get you. You can't double cross us and get away with it."

The child has been under guard since the letter was received.
